NUNS AIM FOR POPE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The 750 Roman Catholic nuns meeting here this weekend want an equal partnership in the running of the church, including ordination of women and perhaps the eventual election of a woman pope.

The members of the National Assembly of Women Religious say they seek more control over their own lives so they can respond better to today's social issues.

"I am 'church' as much as any bishop," Sister Catherine Pinkerton, 53, said. "We want partnership in the church.

"The whole thrust of this organization is that women should be at the decision-making and policy-making levels in the church."

And she said this includes the possibility of a woman pope some day.

CHILLY NIGHT

A clear sky combined with a cool, light wind Friday night resulted in the temperature dropping to its lowest point for this time of the year in the Greater Victoria area, according to the weather office.

The thermometer registered 8 degrees. The previous record was nine degrees.

Strike Continues, Fishermen Decide

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The fishermen's component of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union has for the second time rejected a "final offer" from British Columbia's major fish packers.

The vote against acceptance was 64.1 per cent.

Union president Homer Stevens said the strike that began July 25 will continue even though shoreworkers belonging to the union voted acceptance by 78 per cent and tendermen voted acceptance by 76 per cent Thursday.

The second vote for fishermen came after the union's joint union committee considered the results of the first vote.

Stevens said the UFAWU still was willing to return to the bargaining table with the B.C. Fisheries Association.

He said the vote Friday was not a vote of non-confidence in the union executive.

"The fishermen just don't think the association's proposal comes close to meeting their needs," said Stevens. "They don't like the minimum prices offered. They want the company to pay half of the Canada Pension Plan. They want 70 per cent of the medical and dental paid by the company.

"They are angry at the company's refusal to put more money in the United Fishermen's welfare fund. The whole matter of safety was completely rejected by the association. There was no agreement over a minimum price for salmon eggs."

Union fishermen will likely continue to sell their catches to the public as the strike goes on, a spokesman said today in Vancouver.

Nick Carr said it would be recommended that the fishermen go out to maintain the supply for sale.

Carr said UFAWU officials were meeting today for an all-day policy conference "to decide where we go from here."

In the first vote, result of which was announced Thursday night, 62 per cent of the fishermen voted for rejection. "Substantially fewer cast ballots in the first vote," a union spokesman said.

"A full mobilization to picket duties has been called for," the union spokesman said.

The Native Brotherhood of B.C., which represents most of the Indian commercial fishermen voted 92.2 per cent in favor of accepting the association's offer. The brotherhood, also involved in a jurisdictional dispute with the UFAWU, went on strike Aug. 4.

"We can't make them fish," said Jerry Spitz of the association. "Fishermen, unlike shoreworkers and tendermen, are covered by no labor legislation and are not even a trade union. They are independent contractors and if they decide not to sell their fish to us we can't do anything about it."

Canadian Autos Dumped?

Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—The U.S. Treasury department is initiating a formal investigation into charges that Canadian-made cars are being "dumped" on to the American market, although it has "substantial doubt" foreign imports are hurting the U.S. auto industry.

Assistant Treasury Secretary David Macdonald said the investigation is being launched because of complaints from a Pennsylvania congressman and the United Auto Workers union that foreign cars are being sold in the U.S. at prices below those charged in the countries where they are manufactured.

In addition to Canada, the treasury will investigate car imports from the United Kingdom, West Germany, France, Belgium, Italy, Sweden and Japan.

France Halts Arms Sale To S. Africa

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing said today that France will halt arms sales to white-ruled South Africa.

Sources close to the president said the arms embargo will be placed on weapons used by ground and air forces, but that naval armaments will not be included.

Giscard d'Estaing, flanked by President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire at a news conference ending a three-day visit, said France and Zaire condemned apartheid in South Africa in the same terms.

"On this condemnation, accompanied of course with an interruption of all arms deliveries to South Africa, as well as Namibia, our positions are totally alike," Giscard D'Estaing said.

France has been one of South Africa's principal arms suppliers, selling the South Africans jet aircraft, helicopters, submarines, missiles, and armored vehicles.

Ulster Rioting Flares

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Rioting flared in several Roman Catholic neighborhoods of Belfast and Londonderry today on the fourth anniversary of the start of internment — the British policy of detaining suspected extremists without trial.

Demonstrators battled British soldiers, threw bottles, stones and several blast bombs at them, then assaulted military reinforcements when they arrived.

A dead man with bullet wounds in the chest was dumped outside Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital and the army said soldiers found a badly-injured woman lying in a street where fighting had taken place.

Several organizations including the outlawed Irish Republican Army had called for pre-dawn street demonstrations to mark the day four years ago when British soldiers started arresting suspects under the internment policy.

Lebanese Villages Shelled

Times News Services

SIDON, Lebanon — Israeli gunboats appeared off southern Lebanon Friday night as Israeli artillery shelled three Lebanese villages close to the border, local residents said.

The Lebanese army fired flares in the Naqoura area when reports of the gunboats were received at about 9:30 p.m. local time, they said. Naqoura is on the Mediterranean coast on the border with Israel.

The villages of Yarin and Dhaira, near Tyre, and the village of Aitaroun, near Bint Jbeil, were the targets of intermittent artillery shelling but the villagers reported no casualties or damage.

Israeli flares also were fired in an area of two other villages in the Bint Jbeil district — Yaroun and Maroun Ar-Ras — which have been the targets of Israeli attacks in the past, the residents said.

Since an attack against Tyre and a neighboring refugee camp on Tuesday — when 18 persons, including four Lebanese army officers, were killed — Palestinian commandos have been on a state of alert, the Palestine news agency (WAFA) says.

Lebanese army advanced posts also were under alert, the local residents said.

There was no Israeli air activity late Friday evening and there was no official confirmation in Beirut of earlier reports that the Israelis were massing troops on the border.

Meanwhile on the diplomatic front, Israel has asked U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to postpone his forthcoming Middle East trip until it can respond to further clarifications of the latest Egyptian positions on an interim agreement in the Sinai.

Kissinger had reportedly suggested that he begin his next diplomatic shuttle in the third week of August, possibly Aug. 20, in the hope of concluding the long drawn-out negotiations on an interim agreement.

The Israelis say they feel that the gap between their position and the Egyptian one is still too wide and should be narrowed further before Kissinger makes the trip.

Opposition Swells For Portugal Junta

LISBON (AP) — An avalanche of civilian and military opposition bore down today on Premier Vasco Goncalves, threatening to smash his government and block Portugal's Communist course.

The Armed Forces Movement (AFM), leader of the leftist revolution and Goncalves's power base, cracked wide apart as moderate officers rushed to sign a document denouncing the premier's Communist-line policies a day after he formed a new cabinet.

President Francisco da Costa Gomes and internal security chief Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho, Goncalves's partners in the country's all-powerful junta, were moving toward the moderate camp, AFM leaders reported.

Portugal's two biggest parties, the Socialists and Popular Democrats, spokesmen for 6½ per cent of the electorate, lined up behind the dissident officers.

The military's bloodless revolt encompassed the entire armed forces—from the navy, traditionally the most radical branch, to the air force, the most conservative.

Military sources said more than 400 officers have signed the dissident document, drawn up by front-line heroes of the revolution, within hours of its appearance Thursday night. It already had been signed by nine of the 30 members of the Revolutionary Council, top military body under the crumbling junta.

The political violence that has bloodied Portugal in recent days subsided as marines moved into northern towns to disperse anti-communist mobs.

Officially, the junta denounced the document, calling it "pernicious and divisionist." But it threatened no punitive action.

The dissidents, however, said Carvalho and Costa Gomes are in their camp.

The navy chief of staff, Admiral Jose Pinheiro Azevedo, Goncalves's new navy minister, formally authorized the circulation of the document. Further proof of the unrest in the navy came with the resignations of 37 submarine officers, including four commanders, who accused the government of planting a Communist spy in their unit.

The Roman Catholic Church added to the pressure on Goncalves with a call for an antigovernment rally today in the northern city of Braga, hub of anti-radical demonstrations that have taken four lives this month.

INDIANS NO WORSE

MONTREAL (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand told a news conference at the American Bar Association (ABA) Friday that Canada's Indians are no more given to violence than other groups.

"There's no doubt a small number of very militant and violence-prone Indians in Canada, but I can say that about any group."

He would not comment on an RCMP report on 'Red Power'—made public earlier this week—which said the RCMP had reason to believe some Indian groups were importing arms into the contry.

Spain To Curb Violations

OTTAWA (FP) — Spanish authorities have agreed to try to curtail violations committed by their fishing fleet off Canada's east coast, it was announced Friday.

A statement from the external affairs department said officials of the Spanish and Canadian governments met here Wednesday and Thursday to work out fisheries problems.

Last July 23, Canada threatened to close its Atlantic ports to the Spanish fleet if "certain violations" of fishing regulations were not stopped.

The Spanish agreed to work with Canada, the statement said, to obtain "improved compliance" with regulations set by the International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries (ICNAF).

It was agreed that Spanish inspectors would work with Canadian inspectors in order to protect the "serious decline in fish stocks."

Sea Blast to Test Seismographs

Seismographs at scattered points in B.C. will record an undersea blast to be triggered in the deeps off northern Vancouver Island when sea conditions are right.

It will be one of the largest explosions—nearly three tons—of outdated munitions disposed of by the Canadian Forces diving and demolition unit of Pacific Maritime Command, and is being timed and placed to assist geophyscists in their study of earthquakes.

Dr. W. G. Milne, of the earth physics branch of the department of energy, mines and resources, said it will be the first time such an exercise has been done locally, but the method is used from time to time elsewhere such as off the British Isles.

Scientists will use the blast to calibrate detection instruments used in the study of earthquakes. Seismographs are located at Victoria, Port Alberni, Port Hardy, Queen Charlotte City, Fort St. John, Penticton and Haney.

The blast will be set off about 100 miles west of Cape Scott where the sea bed is more than 1,000 feet deep. Dr. Milne said it will be triggered at a precise depth of 500 feet in order to benefit as much as possible from absorption and reflection of the energy produced in the explosion.

It will take about one minute and five seconds for the shock wave to reach Victoria.

He Had 8 to 5 Job . . . Defrauding the UIC

WINNIPEG (CP) — Crawford Varnes, a former employee of the Unemployment Insurance Commission who defrauded the UIC of more than $62,000, was sentenced Friday to two years in prison, to be followed by three years on probation.

Varnes, 41, of Winnipeg, was arrested two months ago and pleaded guilty June 25 to 44 charges of fraud. Provincial Judge George Lockwood said in passing sentence that his prime consideration was to deter others from similar crimes.

Court was told Varnes, employed by the UIC for 10 years prior to his resignation, used 24 social insurance cards he obtained under phoney names and collected benefits in various towns.

Varnes told police in a statement he established bank accounts and post office box numbers in as many as 12 rural Manitoba communities, to disguise the over-all operation.

The applications for benefits were sent in by mail, and when the UIC made inquiries or asked for an interview, Varnes would send a letter terminating his claim, saying he had found a job.

Varnes got the social insurance cards simply by filling out the required forms he obtained at a post office. He mailed them to Ottawa without proof of identification, court was told.

Crown counsel George Dangerfield said Varnes launched his complicated scheme in late 1969 when he quit his job with the UIC at Yorkton, Sask. and moved back to Winnipeg.

Court was told that for the next five years, Varnes' wife saw him leave home each weekday at 8 a.m. and return at 5 p.m. and believed Varnes' story that he was working in public relations.

Varnes was caught after the UIC discovered two of his fictitious names were using the same post office box in Portage La Prairie to receive benefits. The post office was staked out by RCMP.

Judge Lockwood said Varnes was able to support himself and his family comfortably for close to five years "without doing an honest day's work."

The judge said, "one would think it not beyond human ingenuity to devise a system of checks" to prevent such long-term abuses of the system. He said it was clear there should be tighter regulations on obtaining social insurance cards.

Sask. Union Tightens Grip

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan Government Employees' Association (SGEA) announced Friday it will fine any of its 14,000 members who cross picket lines set up by striking members of the union's labor services sector.

The announcement was part of a series of steps designed to escalate the strike and virtually shut down government operations.

Although the labor-service employees who started their strike a week earlier comprise only 5,000 of the provincial government's employees, the rest are in the SGEA's public service sector.

When the picket lines were first extended to general office buildings, most public servants declined to cross the lines, but 10 to 20 per cent reported for work, some by using back entrances.

SGEA spokesman Harvey Linnen said Friday the picket lines will be extended Monday to more general government buildings and any SGEA member crossing one of the lines will be fined a day's pay for each day he does so.

Members of the public service sector declining to cross the lines have already been told by the government they will lose all pay for days they are not at work.

Linnen also said picket lines will be set up around the head offices of Crown corporations, including Saskatchewan Power Corp. and the telephone corporation.

Crown corporation employees are members of separate unions, but Linnen expressed optimism that the members of the other unions will not cross the lines.

Most government liquor stores were closed Friday night as picket lines were placed around them.

Before that, the chief effect on the public of the strike by labor service employees had come in provincial parks, where services were reduced, and in such cases as delayed welfare cheques due to most public service members not crossing picket lines.

The highways department warned Friday that some secondary roads are showing signs of deterioration due to lack of maintenance by striking highway crews.

In other developments, it was disclosed that the range between government and union positions on wage increases have narrowed.

The latest government offer was a basic minimum wage of $3.23 an hour, up from a previous offer of $3.02. The lowest wage rate now is $2.80.

The union has asked for $4.75, down sharply from the original request for $7.02.

Government spokesmen have accused the union of seeking pay much above that in similar non-government jobs and have declared the government will not abandon the principle that government employees should not get a great deal more than taxpayers get for similar work.

Linnen said the union suggested Friday that the two parties submit to mediation in their dispute, but the government negotiators declined.

Esquimalt CUPE To Vote

The 80 Canadian Union of Public Employees members in Esquimalt, the last group left to settle terms of a 1975-76 contract, will vote on the terms of a new agreement Thursday.

Municipal council is also expected to ratify the contract at a meeting next week.

A settlement in Esquimalt would end the round of civic contract negotiations which began in 1974 and included a three-month strike-lockout of municipal employees in the Greater Victoria area.

Only Esquimalt and Saanich did not settle contract with the majority of CUPE locals which returned to work in April.

The settlement in Esquimalt was delayed by a Labor Relations Board case in which the union charged it was illegally locked out. The LRB ruled against the union.

Esquimalt local president Larry Flannagan said today details of the contract would not be released until after Thursday's vote.

He said the contract differed mainly from the one accepted by other CUPE locals in the area of fringe benefits.

Rivals Use Bazookas In Fight for Luanda

LUANDA, Angola (UPI) — Rival black nationalist groups battled for two hours today on a hillside in full view of newsmen in this tense seaside capital. Three men were reported killed and scores more injured.

The pro-communist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which controls most of the city, launched a two-hour bazooka attack on the western-oriented National Front for the Liberation of Angola, which is holed out in some sections, reporters said.

In a significant development, forces from a third group, the National Union for the Total Liberation of Angola, which has remained neutral until this week, joined the National Front side in the fighting.

The battle began when the Popular Movement fired a non-stop bazooka barrage on a position held by the National Front, which holds a 16th century fortress controlling access to the Luanda oil refinery.

A spokesman for the Front said if the attack was resumed, its troops would blow up the refinery, threatening fuel supplies.

The capital is in a state of seige, surrounded by National Front forces who have vowed to recapture the city from the Popular Front before the territory gains formal independence from Portugal Nov. 11.

The two sides have been fighting fierce battles in all parts of Angola since last month.

O.C. SOCCER

LONDON (Reuter) — English League champions Derby County cantered to a 2-0 victory over Football Association Cup-holders West Ham United in the FA Charity Shield match at Wembley Saturday.

The match, a traditional showpiece which precedes the English soccer league season, provided plenty of skill and entertainment for the 60,000 crowd which included Dr. Artemio Franchi, Italian president of the European Football Union.

The only blot on a sunny afternoon was the seemingly inevitable hooliganism among the crowd. With beer cans flying, police arrested five fighting spectators and broke up skirmishes outside the stadium after the match.

the weather

Under clear skies southern B.C. was unseasonably cool just before daybreak. A preliminary appraisal indicates that a few points in B.C. were close to equalling their lowest temperatures on record for August 9. In this category were Victoria Airport, Vancouver Airport and Abbotsford. Meanwhile, another surge of fresh Pacific air will intrude upon the province. It reached the Queen Charlottes this morning and will spread into other regions today and tonight accompanied by cool rains. On Sunday the north coast and the Kootenays will receive a little shower activity but clearing skies are in prospect elsewhere in B.C.

HOW THE "ROCK OF GIBRALTAR" WORKS FOR B.C.

When the Gibraltar Mine came to the Cariboo in 1971, it marked an important step forward for Williams Lake. The town had long been the centre of ranching and sawmilling activity...and mining added substantially to its economic base. Many of the mine's 500 employees and their families became residents of Williams Lake...new homes were built...and with more customers for many goods and services, new business opportunities arose. The company's operations also created a new demand for the products of several local industries. But the benefits of a mine like Gibraltar extend far beyond the immediate community. With its annual production of about 100 million pounds of copper in concentrate, this single mine each year returns millions of dollars in tax revenue to British Columbia. And Gibraltar is no isolated example. Throughout B.C., mining is a major economic factor...in some cases the dominant factor in a town's existence. Combine the dozens of minesites around our province, the approximately 15,000 people directly employed by mining and the nearly one billion dollars that mining annually returns to our province...and you've got B.C.'s second largest industry. The "rock of Gibraltar" and the products of our other great mines are working for B.C. in ways that benefit everyone.

'Mayonnaise Lady' Wins Again

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The "Mayonnaise Lady" of the University of California has won another legal victory. This time, the court said she was manipulated into being a victim of the Peter Principle.

Doris Juddy, 61, was fired from her food services job at the university Feb. 4, 1973, for failing to spread mayonnaise to the edges of the bread and being slow with sauerkraut on hotdogs.

She won a Yolo County Superior Court decision reinstating her to the job with $7,500 back pay. The university appealed.

In a decision reported Thursday, the 3rd District Court of Appeal in Sacramento unanimously upheld the reinstatement, saying her "promotion" to head of the sandwich department seemed a deliberate invocation of the Peter Principle, done in hopes she would provide ample reasons to discharge her."

Final Session Today In Forest Mediation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The final session of mediated talks today in the British Columbia forest dispute will give all sides a chance to present changes in position, Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon, special mediator in the dispute, said Friday.

Mr. Justice Hutcheon, a B.C. supreme court justice, said he anticipated "some changes of position on each side" but could not determine how great the changes of position would be.

He said he would hear from industry and the three unions involved in separate meetings and would begin preparing his report when the final session ends.

"The report will be ready for Tuesday," said Mr. Justice Hutcheon. "I will be asking recommendations for terms of a settlement of the dispute and, although the terms may be somewhat disagreeable to some, they hopefully would be accepted for settlement."

Mr. Justice Hutcheon said a rift that developed this week between the International Woodworkers of America and the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada "has raised some heat in their negotiating committees and in some meetings this week."

He hoped it would not seriously affect the possibility of a settlement.

"These are mature people and I'm sure that differences arising which tend to defeat the objectives they are working toward will be subdued by them," said Mr. Justice Hutcheon.

The dispute betfeen the two unions was recognized and dealt with Friday when the B.C. Federation of Labor and officials of the non-affiliated PPWC met to discuss picketing activity by the pulp union.

Stan Shewaga, PPWC spokesman, said according to an agreement made with the federation, the union will ask its locals for notification in advance of new picket lines appearing. The national office will then otify the federation which, in turn, will notify the IWA.

Shewaga said, however, he could not guarantee against the possibility of further sudden picketing in the dispute.

Shewaga said the PPWC still plans to picket as many employer operations as possible.

"We don't like to put people out of work but our people are out of work now," Shewaga said.

PRISONER CHOKES IN MEDICAL CENTRE

A 23-year-old man who was involved in two major B.C. crimes and a prison incident in Vancouver and Victoria over the past year died Thursday in the federal corrections service medical centre at Abbotsford.

Centre director Dr. Chuni Roy said Robert Garry Hume suddenly became ill and choked to death on his own vomit.

Hume, a B.C. Penitentiary inmate was serving seven years arising out of an incident last fall when two RCMP officers were held at gunpoint in the Executive House, 777 Douglas.

At the time of his arrest, the next day, it was discovered he was wanted for escaping from the federal prison in Saskatchewan where he was serving 24 years for armed robberies.

Hume held a B.C. Pen employee at knifepoint for more than eight hours July 4 to get into the medical centre for psychiatric and medical treatment. He released his hostage, barbering instructor John Rocheleau, unharmed after he was promised to be moved.

Hume was also one of four prisoners who shot a citizen and slashed a policeman and deputy sheriff in an escape from Vancouver City jail last November.

He was awaiting trial on charges of attempted murder, escape, wounding and armed robberies.

Food Inquiry Extended

Labor Minister Bill King Friday granted a further two-week extension of the appointment of industrial inquiry commissioner Clive McKee who is trying to bring about a settlement of the British Columbia food industry dispute.

King said the extension would allow McKee "to fully consider the various economic interests in the food industry negotiations."

McKee began hearings July 21 and last week was granted a one-week extension.

Unions in the dispute that threatens to close 100 B.C. supermarkets have agreed to continue working until the inquiry has been completed.

Needed: Public Debate

Lame ducks holding public office tend to be dismissed out of hand. They start losing authority and influence soon after they announce they won't be candidates at the next election. So it is with Mayor Peter Pollen of Victoria.

He issued dire warnings this week about the future of the city's finances — and no one listened. The rest of council seemed embarrassed when the mayor popped off about Victoria's frightening prospects, brandishing magazines which outlined the horrible slow decline of New York.

It's a pity, because the mayor should be listened to. Unlike the other honorable councillors, Pollen has nothing to lose by speaking a few plain truths, even if they make some people uncomfortable and alienate others who would rather not face squarely certain problems before they grow into crises and catastrophes a few years down the road. He's made it perfectly clear he will not stand for office this year (although he'd win in a walk if he wanted a third term).

Admittedly, the mayor's just asking to be ignored when he mutters about contracting out things such as "protective services," that is, the police force, presumably. Such proposals are patently unworkable.

But no one should doubt that the mayor's concern for the city is truly genuine. He sees with crystal clarity Victoria following American cities into bankruptcy unless something is done to keep the civic budget (read employee wages) under control.

Wages have to bear some relation to productivity and to local conditions and peculiarities. In negotiations, employees are forever chasing after parity with some other group of workers elsewhere. But why should Victoria policemen or firemen be paid the same as New York's where living and working conditions are vastly different?

Mayor Pollen can stretch his comparison with New York only so far, though. Victoria has special problems of its own which do not relate to the American experience. Victoria has nowhere near 10 per cent of its inhabitants on welfare, nor the huge areas of slums and vacant condemned neighborhoods, nor an archaic and decaying system of public services.

As Ald. Sam Bawlf notes, Victoria misses nearly $1 million in property taxes a year because the provincial government does not pay its full share. The capital city of British Columbia should not be penalized because the provincial government has concentrated its staff and offices here.

And there must be some cuts council can make in its budget of $32.2 million besides $8,500 from the city archivist's office. Some hard decisions will have to be made. Five year plans for capital improvements may turn into seven or eight year plans. Victoria, the city of parks and gardens, might let the grass grow in parks and stop watering the boulevards and establish mandatory recycling of household wastes.

Unfortunately, aside from the mayor's periodic bulletins, the issue doesn't seem to be debated much. Council incumbents (and the flock of candidates who will seek seats there this year) should set out to create a public debate on civic priorities. What kind of city do Victorians want, and what are they prepared to pay in taxes to make it that way?

Unless the big questions are discussed, and various solutions and options proposed, then the city is going to be nickel-and-dimed to death. When the bailiffs come to enforce civic bankruptcy, we'll still be discussing how much money the archivist's office can be spared.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

From Colony to Nation And Over the Cliff

Industrial output has fallen since March 1974. More than 700,000 Canadians are out of work. Our trade deficit will be more than $1 billion by the end of the year. The country is fast running out of petroleum energy and the government ran out of guts a long time ago.

After two budgets in seven months the disposable income of Canadian wage earners has been badly eroded by government taxes and unabated inflation. Business has received small incentives, most noticeably a investment tax credit that will buy machinery but produce few jobs.

Economists insist the recession is over. Meanwhile, food prices will rise. Unemployment will increase to around eight per cent by the end of the year. Don't worry though. Everything will be beautiful by mid-1977, all things being equal.

The trouble is all things are not equal. Acute gas and oil shortages coupled with high wage demands in the next five years, to name only two possibilities, could distort all the carefully thought-out economic equations.

Reading the country's business press, one is left with an optimistic impression.

Headlines such as Montreal Market Bouyant, and Dip in GNP Expected to Be Small, give me a sense of security. Alas, confidence is short-lived. Two different publications alternately inform me that the American recovery was faster than expected and slower than expected.

Take your pick.

It is significant too that domestic expectations are all geared to U.S. recovery — the legacy of geography and a captive economy.

Another impression gleaned from the business press is an implication that everything would work out in the marketplace if organized labor would decrease its demands.

Few politicians or editorial writers come right out and say it, but the code words are there. An editorial in the Financial Times put it this way: "... there has been a failure to tackle underlying weaknesses in the economy such as putting the lid on cost pressures and providing stimulus to business investment."

I would translate "putting the lid on cost pressures" as meaning government should restrain wage demands by legislation.

Certainly, government should restrain wage demands, as long as it shows equal resolve in holding down price increases. But it is hypocritical to point to labor as the only selfish element in the economy.

In a liberal, not to mention literate, democracy checks and balances must be distributed with an even hand. Government knows this in spades. And I would venture that one of the reasons the Trudeau administration has dithered is because a Liberal government could not bring itself to lashing its constant supporters. Conversely, if the whip was applied only to labor things would get evil indeed.

The prime minister's Thursday press conference in which he stated that his government has been only partially successful in controlling inflation must rank as the understatement of the year. Such candor from the man himself probably left the assembled scribes blinking back their tears.

It's like standing between the horse and wagon; you will either be kicked by the horse or run over by the wagon. In my memory no Canadian administration has ever thought of climbing into the driver's seat and taking a firm grip on the reins.

Up until now, it didn't matter, mainly because the wagon was weighted down with goodies. But supplies are getting low and government is tangled up in the well worn harness.

As Northrop Frye wrote in The Bush Garden, Canada "... is practically the only country left in the world which is a pure colony, colonial in psychology as well as in mercantile economics."

It is interesting that a professor of English literature can put his finger on the trouble while our economists and governments keep rooting around for the last few Keynsian truffles in an exhausted field.

Government must extricate itself from the traces and grab the reins or horse and wagon will proceed on their mindless way over the cliff. —G. R. O.

N-Sale: Cutthroat Competition

By JEFF CARRUTHERS

OTTAWA — Canada and France are quite a team when it comes to spreading nuclear technology around the world, even if the two countries don't realize what a dynamic duo they really are.

Impossible, you say. France and Canada are at two separate and distant poles when it comes to their nuclear policies. Canada, according to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, is selling nuclear reactors abroad only out of a sense of duty, so that we can help developing nations acquire much-needed nuclear energy that is critical to a nation's advancement. And anyway, Canada insists on the toughest nuclear safeguards in the world. Right?

France, by contrast, is a maverick, refusing to sign the nuclear nonproliferation treaty and willing to sell nuclear reactors and, yes, even plutonium extraction equipment to almost any nation in the world.

ATOMIC BLAST
. . . from Candu to cataclysm

But there are some cruel facts which show that Canada and France do have something in common. Take the list of countries negotiating to buy plutonium extraction equipment from France — equipment that could be used to make advanced nuclear fuels or weapons-grade materials for nuclear devices. There's Pakistan, Taiwan, South Korea and Argentina, according to federal external affairs department officials and according to the French government.

Now compare that with the list of countries Canada is selling or has sold Candu-style nuclear reactors to. There's India, Pakistan, Taiwan, South Korea and Argentina.

The only difference between the two lists is India, a country most Canadians know well. India used a Canadian-supplied research reactor to make the nuclear material for its first nuclear device, exploded last year to the surprise of Canada. Apparently India has since been refused any more nuclear technology, equipment or supplies by Canada. So now, India has been buying most of her nuclear supplies from France.

All of the countries undoubtedly will assure Canada that they will be using the plutonium extraction facilities solely for advanced fuels research. They will point to Canada's own efforts in research to develop new fuels using plutonium extracted from the spent fuel from Candu reactors.

Canada will also undoubtedly argue that insistence on tougher safeguards, even imposed retroactively in the case of past purchases, will prevent what otherwise might be the inevitable fabrication of nuclear devices.

There are obvious concerns among leading nuclear technology and international political experts whether a piece of paper, no matter how long or detailed, will prevent any nation from doing what it believes to be in its best interests.

Canada has already started negotiating with Pakistan in an attempt to impose tougher safeguards retroactively on a small nuclear power reactor built there under an aid program by Canadian General Electric. The Pakistanis are fighting back, diplomatically. And they have good reason to be reticent, especially if neighbor India gets by with less stringent safeguards with Canada and since India already has a nuclear capability.

Taiwan is another story altogether. Canada, remember, no longer has diplomatic relations with Taiwan, which has a small Candu research reactor like the type used in making India's first nuclear device. Canadian government officials admit that the safeguards applying to the Taiwan reactor are not tough enough in view of the Indian situation. But they also admit there's little Canada can do to change the situation. Canada just doesn't have any leverage — except, perhaps, Taiwan's interest in Canadian uranium for other power reactors. The only hope is that the U.S. will keep Taiwan and perhaps any other Canadian customers in line.

But West Germany showed it was willing to buck the U.S. and sell a complete nuclear technology package to Brazil, despite the obvious invitation to nuclear trouble. Which strengthens the argument that if Canada doesn't sell reactors abroad, there are other countries all too willing to step in quickly and fill the void.

How did Canada get so lucky and pick five customers with either already obvious or inevitable nuclear weapons aspirations?

Like France, Canada was looking for international customers just about the time the second generation of nuclear countries were deciding to buy. That and a little bit of naivete mixed with some bad luck.

There's very little Canada can do now, except perhaps wake up to the inevitable and accept publicly that one or more of our customers will probably decide in the future to join the nuclear club one way or the other. As a minimum, Canadians deserve to know what they are getting into.

The other hope is that other nuclear selling nations like West Germany and the United States might also realize, and publicly accept the responsibility for, the disasters they are courting by willy-nilly selling or even giving away complete nuclear technology packages to non-nuclear countries. With the use of more common sense and less of the current cutthroat approach in the nuclear business, maybe there will be a co-operative way of minimizing the nuclear risks — even if it's obviously too late to eliminate the risk of further nuclear weapons proliferation as nuclear power spreads its tenacles throughout the developed and developing world.

Pattern of Paranoia in Provincial Politics

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Aficionados of the bizarre in British Columbia politics were treated to a 24-karat example of the genre in the last two weeks with the summer dog days' sensation about possible CIA infiltration of the B.C. government.

Until Lands, Forests and Water Resources Minister Robert Williams came back and deflated the speculation with a flat denial, it appeared to be the biggest story in Canadian politics since the country learned that Mackenzie King consulted crystal balls.

Did Williams actually say those things? He now denies that he ventured anything more than a speculative aside "to the effect that with obvious proven interests and involvement of the CIA in Latin America, it is hard to believe that they didn't have interests north of the 49th parallel."

Friends and relatives and acquaintances among the press have noted how out of character the remarks seemed, that Williams — who has a reputation for carefully researching any charges he makes — wouldn't make such outrageous statements, such obvious errors of simple facts.

Only Williams and the young reporter know for certain what was said in the interview. Handell doesn't seem upset at all at being called a liar and a fabricator. Read between the lines and he seems to be saying, with a wink and a nudge:

"What's more important, the reputation of a fledgling reporter or a cabinet minister in North America's only socialist government? If disowning the whole interview keeps Williams and the NDP in office and Social Credit out, then so be it. Long live realpolitik."

Considered on its own, what Williams supposedly said down in Madison, Wisconsin two months ago does seem strange. But side by side with other recent statements of his and claims made by other B.C. cabinet ministers lately, it's only the most outrageous of a whole string of assertions — a pattern of paranoia.

In February, Williams hit the headlines with charges that a "secret committee" existed at B.C. Hydro and Power Authority to re-allocate escalating costs of the Columbia River project, to disguise the true figures of the bill for the three dams and associated work. Denials by the principals involved followed, Williams made public "confidential" memos whose confidentiality is debatable at least, and a full-scale public inquiry was promised. There the matter rests still, and no inquiry has yet been established.

Early in May, Premier Dave Barrett claimed that Social Credit had a $4.5 million "free enterprise education fund" controlled by Robert Bonner, J. V. Clyne and Arthur Foulkes. They met weekly, according to the premier, to discuss raising more funds and to disburse money for the party's heavy advertising campaign and to pay expenses.

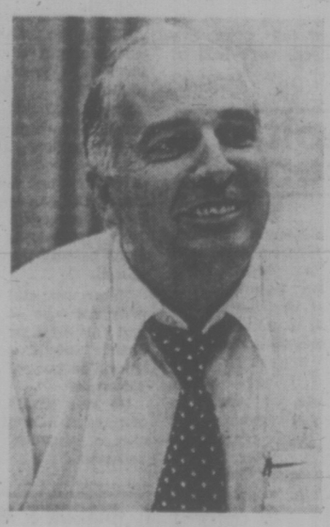
Barrett was forced to eat his words after he was called three kinds of liar by Clyne, Foulkes and Bonner and when he failed to produce any proof of his claims of a Socred conspiracy.

As exhibit C, consider the all-out effort the premier and his ministers made to suggest some local Watergate in the irregular bookkeeping practices of the B.C. Railway under W. A. C. Bennett. Was the railway under orders from the top to disguise the real costs? Or was it just antiquated accounting, a disagreement among economists over depreciation practices?

Barrett and company certainly tried hard to prove the former, but so far the evidence is not conclusive. Innocence should be presumed until guilt is proven beyond a doubt.

Other bits and pieces fall into place. One cabinet minister in the Barrett government has told reporters he is certain the RCMP has tapped cabinet ministers' telephones and maintains surveillance of them.

(It's not confined to the NDP. Liberal leader David Anderson said last year the phones in his office in the legislative buildings were tapped. Press gallery members who report the same odd clicks and buzzes and dead lines have a more prosaic theory about the overloaded, inefficient government switchboard operation.)



ROBERT WILLIAMS
. . . conspiracies abounding

Judging from their statements on the Williams-CIA allegations, both Health Minister Dennis Cocke and Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall strongly believe that some sinister force is at work undermining the NDP. If not the CIA, then some other mysterious group.

No one who has followed, even perfunctorily, the disclosures from Washington, D.C. and elsewhere about the CIA's bulging black bag — from the Rockefeller report ex-agent Philip Agee's frightening book, CIA Diary (which CIA director William Colby said caused "massive changes" in the agency's Latin American operations) to a recent account in Harper's magazine about JM WAVE, the CIA's secret war against Cuba—will dismiss speculation that the CIA has stretched one of its tentacles into B.C. too.

The CIA can't possibly be blamed for everything that goes on in the world, but the idea has a powerful attraction. It's a handy scapegoat for a government faced with strong opposition to many of its policies. Politicians want dearly to be loved by their subjects, and they find it easier to blame cabals of desperate conspirators than to entertain painful thoughts of unpopularity.

And people like to believe in conspiracies. They want to believe that the strings are being pulled by a few individuals. Millions of people believe Adolf Hitler is alive and well in Uruguay, that the CIA (or the Cubans, or the Russians, or Texas oilmen) killed John F. Kennedy, or that an international Zionist (or communist or vegetarian) conspiracy controls all the world's banks.

In British Columbia, the best examples of this syndrome have come from the governing NDP. But the infection isn't limited to it alone. While the NDP sees dangerous right-wing conspiracies in the press and business community, Social Credit talks of overthrowing communism in B.C. and restoring freedom to oppressed peoples. Social Crediters see reds under every bed, New Democrats check their closets for spies in trench coats.

With feverish evangelism, each tries to outdo the other in horror stories, escalating the overkill. By election time, no doubt we'll be hearing accusations of plans by the other side to bayonet babies and send political incorrigibles to Ocean Falls.

Of what use is such posturing? British Columbia is not Chile, or even Sweden, and the NDP is not part of the Comintern. Conversely, Socreds are not two-headed John Birchers who eat children for breakfast. Both parties would do better to start dealing in realities, and drop the fantasies of their wildest nightmares.

FUTURE OF JAPAN A HAZARDOUS GUESS

(The last of three articles)

TOKYO — 1945: Destruction and defeat. 1975: Economic power, military weakness, political uncertainty. 1985, 1995: What? To predict or even suggest what will happen to Japan in the next decades is a dangerous undertaking, particularly in view of the rapid changes of the past 30 years. Nevertheless, a correspondent who is saying goodbye after three years in residence — one-tenth of the period since World War II — is tempted to hazard some hazardous guesses.

Answers or insights to Japan's future, if they be accurate, would complete a significant piece of the world puzzle. Third in the world in total production and one of the few loosely committed "swing countries," whose actions could affect all others, Japan cannot be ignored — even if often it cannot be fathomed either.

To speak of the future in Japan, one must speak also of the past. Japan above all is a story of both constancy and change, of the tensions and compromises between some of the swiftest economic and social transformations in history and some of the most stable and unyielding patterns of culture known to man.

Two thousand years of history, most of it in relative isolation in this island chain, have left extremely strong forms, conventions and ways of acting. Sometimes old patterns persist in modern adaptation — for example, the elaborate rituals of greeting, purchasing and packaging purchases in department stores, or the samuria-clan conduct of business organizations, political groups and even radical activists.

"It has often been argued that the war brought a fundamental change in the Japanese. It might be truer to argue that since the circumstances and supports of life in Japan have altered radically, ideas and attitudes to life have in turn changed, just as clothes are changed with the coming of spring after cold winter," wrote Chine Nakane, the social antropoligist who has so accurately analyzed her own society.

"It is Japanese nature to accept change with little resistance and, indeed, to welcome and value change; but a superficial change of outlook, as facile as changes in fashion, has not the slightest effect on the firm persistence of the basic nature and core of personal relations and group dynamics."

Flexibility and adaptability to new circumstances (and, on the dark side of the coin, lack of fixed principles or philosophy) help explain Japan's phenomenal success. Provided with opportunities in a radically changed postwar environment, it was able to make the best of them: U.S. military protection without the costs or disadvantages of a role as active ally; free-flowing industrial raw materials, petroleum and food from abroad at bargain prices; an international trade and monetary system which worked to Japan's advanrage; and an attention lag by the rest of the world, which for many years did not notice Japan's growing economic power or insist on behavior befitting its new status.

Today, the U.S. security relationship continues, although with greater doubt all around as American power ebbs in Asia. The other favorable conditions are changing rapidly or already have changed. Japan has suffered the first serious inflation and also the first period of zero growth since its economic takeoff two decades ago. Imbued with a sense that the ground is shifting under their feet, the Japanese are strongly reasserting their characteristic pessimism. "More and more well-informed Japanese are expressing rather serious concern that the nation is going under," said a respected economist, Prof. Shinichi Ichimura, in a recent symposium.

Rapprochement

—In July, 1971, Japan was shocked by the U.S. rapprochement with China, made over Japan's head and without its knowledge. Fifteen months later the Japanese premier was in Peking to — unlike the United States — establish full diplomatic relations and, not long after, trade and aviation agreements, too.

—In August, 1971, the United States took strong, sudden economic measures to bring down the massive bilateral trade deficit with Japan. Protesting all the way, Japan twice devalued its yen, controlled its exports and opened its market to more imports and foreign investment. The imbalance was reduced and Japan's economy seemed as healthy as ever.

—In Ocotober, 1973, came the worst shock yet — the Arab oil embargo. Within three months, Japan had tilted toward the Arab cause enough to be designated a "friendly nation" entitled to buy the petroleum it needs to live. With massive increases in exports and reduction in import volume, it brought its trade back to a surplus within the year, despite the quadrupled price of oil.

Wage Cuts

Hit with the industrial world's worst inflation, Japan convinced its trade unions to cut their wage increases in half compared with the previous year. It is bringing inflation under control. Unemployment never exceeded two per cent despite more than a year of economic stagnation. The pickup is expected soon.

This sounds considerably easier than it was. Japan's decision-making process, often is tortuously slow and is notoriously vulnerable to objections by small groups. Once consensus is reached, however, movement accelerates.

Governmental decision-making is complicated by the long, slow, steady decline of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, the political vehicle of the conservatives who have ruled Japan almost continuously since the end of World War II. The LDP's inertia and ineptness might bring dire consequences except for the continuing power of an entrenched and effective bureaucracy which runs things behind the scenes. In a country with few outstanding leaders but many good team players, it is often difficult to discover whose hands are at the helm.

The persistent decline of the ruling conservatives — nearing non-majority status in both houses of the national Diet (parliament)—could lead in time to fundamental change, particularly in security arrangements, under a coalition government of socialists. Communists and other opposition parties. More likely is a realignment of the main elements of the conservatives with right-wing Socialists. In fact, negotiations in this direction began last winter, just before the surprise selection of maverick Takeo Miki as LDP president and thus prime minister.

The Miki premiership was an expedient to keep the ruling party together. In the recent Diet session, Miki worked so closely on some issues with the Socialists that there is renewed talk of realignment.

Most of the great turning points in Japanese history have been forced by external circumstances rather than generated from within. Despite the velocity of change in the postwar era — including alterations of daily life and national life that might have torn apart any other society — this reporter's hunch is that external events will continue to hold this island nation in sway.

If the U.S. security arrangements or some combination of other circumstances continue to protect Japan from outside intimidation or takeover, and if the world economy is healthy enough so that Japan can buy the raw materials, energy and food it needs and sell goods to pay for them, then Japan probably will continue on some variation of its present course for a decade, perhaps several decades. Despite many vulnerabilities, Japan will probably do somewhat better than other industrial nations.

But if external circumstances do not permit Japan to continue the present couse, the country will shift to what is possible. If the bottom falls out of its present existence, Japan will have a revolution — although it might not be recognized as such — and adjust to a new existence more quickly than anyone would suppose.

THOUSANDS OF AFRICANS CONFINED

'Millions Out of Madness'

Thousands of mentally ill Africans are living in converted mining compounds run by a South African business group which it has been claimed, "is making millions out of madness."

This scheme, approved and partly financed by the South African government, has been operating since 1963 but until now has been kept secret.

What began as a stopgap measure, because State mental institutions were unable to cope with the number of patients, has grown over the years into a profitable and major business enterprise.

Besides the government payment for each inmate (the rate for whites is four times that for blacks) and the services of publicly paid medical specialists, the company which has the contract uses its patients as a labour force to carry out major works in the hospitals it controls.

It also hires out patients — known to the staff as Wet and Dirties — to local industry on a contract basis. The patients get back only a fraction of the income from their work — mostly in sweets and tobacco — and the company invests the remainder in African trust funds for the benefit of blacks.

The few government officials and businessmen who knew about the deal have never been willing to discuss the extent of the operation. But now that the size of the operation has emerged in South Africa, it has become the target for criticism by doctors and mental care workers and the subject of questions in the parliament there. The minister of health, Dr. Schalk van der Merwe, recently denied allegations of corruption or bribery in the functioning of the scheme.

A new Mental Health Act has been introduced in the republic with proposals for a massive hospitals building scheme to rectify past failures. But even Dr. van der Merwe has admitted that it will take up to 15 years to "clear up the backlog."

Critics of the business scheme have attacked the underlying philosophy which allows responsibility for two-fifths of the country's mentally-ill population to be in the hands of a commercially-oriented corporation. They have objected to the secrecy surrounding the deal, questioned the levels of profit which the companies take and are concerned about the kind of accommodation and treatment patients receive.

★ ★ ★

It has been claimed that the Smith Mitchell group — as the companies are commonly known — now holds a business monopoly in this field. A South African newspaper interview recently quoted one medical authority as saying: "This group can virtually dictate mental health care in the country."

The Johannesburg Sunday Times claimed that the firm and its shareholders were "making millions out of madness" and a now-retired Commissioner for Mental Health described the homes as "human warehouses, rendering only custodial care."

One eye-witness told us that the entrances to various hospital compounds, all separated by high wire-mesh fencing, were patrolled by uniformed guards with rubber truncheons. When he asked the hospital authorities why, he was told: "These blacks like to carry some sort of weapon about with them."

Although the authorities said the truncheons were never used on inmates, this eye-witness recalled an incident when a guard was having lunch out in the open.

★ ★ ★

"Three of the patients, obviously unbalanced, came up to him and tried to take his food. He lashed out at them with his stick and began beating them. When I told the hospital, they assured me, 'That is impossible'."

The Smith Mitchell group does not dispute that it is in the mental health business to make money: "We are there to make a profit, otherwise

'Home' for mentally-ill African women

we wouldn't be doing it," Mr. David Tabatznik, chairman of the group, recently told the Rand Daily Mail.

The firm maintains that but for its interest — whatever the motive — many of the less well off mentally ill in South Africa (principally the non-whites) would get no treatment or care.

South Africa has an enormous mental health problem, created by official inertia — or worse — and compounded by the implementation of apartheid.

In a country of 22 million people, there are 157 registered psychiatrists and 168 psychologists — mostly in private practice. There are no qualified blacks; only one coloured psychiatrist.

Overcrowding in State hospitals has reched a point at which there are no beds for 3,000 patients. Thousands of blacks who are neither criminal nor dangerous are confined in State homes behind metal and barbed-wire fences and still sleep on mats on concrete floors in unheated, unfurnished wards with curtainless windows.

Because of apartheid, non-whites are in a much more perilous plight than whites. In 1970, according to the last available figures, there was one bed for every 470 whites, but only one bed for every 1,800 non-whites (Africans, coloreds, Indians).

Because the laws do not permit the provision of premises for non-whites in white areas, Smith Mitchell hires derelict buildings such as former mining out-houses at a low rent and carries out renovations using the patients' labor.

The government pays Smith Mitchell hospitals a per-patient-per-day fee. For whites (only 650 of the 11,000 the group looks after) it receives £35.50 a year, £18 for coloreds and £7.50 for Africans.

Smith Mitchell companies run four white and nine non-white mental institutions, including one with 3,200 patients at Randwest Millsite near the town of Krugersdorp (this was a mining compound); the nearby Randfontein non-white sanatorium (1,000 women); and two in the Bantu homelands (each housing 1,000 patients). The group will also soon be looking after 1,000 defective children in its various institutions.

State care for non-white retarded children is particularly poor.

The Health Department paid the Smith Mitchell group £1,500,000 last year — one third of its mental health budget — for the care of these patients. Additionally, each of the larger hospitals earned anything from £5,000 to £10,000 by hiring out patients as contract labour — the work being done within the institutions. One psychiatric nurse with 150 "selected" patients worked for over a year virtually constructing a new hospital from an old mining compound.

The hospital authorities regard this as a form of therapeutic treatment. The patients also do a variety of work: making wire coat-hangers, leg-guards for miners, paper carrier bags.

Physical conditions for blacks in the hospitals are primitive by comparison with facilities for whites. Upwards of 30 Africans sleep in each prefabricated dormitory but, with toilets down the centre of the rooms ("squat pans," not seat toilets). There are communal showers and outdoor eating areas.

In an interview with one African nurse at a Smith Mitchell hospital, we were told that patients escaped "because they hate the place." This nurse, who asked not to be identified, said: "The clothing is disgusting and we always have difficulty in getting blankets.

"It is very cold in winter, yet last year there were not stoves in the rooms." (Some stoves have now been provided.) "They have no shoes and there is always a struggle to get some for them. In some of the hospitals, they sleep either on mats — which they make themselves, so it costs the hospital nothing — or on wooden boards."

★ ★ ★

Yet many hospital superintendents defend these conditions, arguing that Africans "prefer to live that way" or that "mental patients are messy and destructive."

Psycho-therapy for blacks is limited. They receive mainly shock treatment and drug therapy. Until recently, it was hospital policy not to use anaesthetics for non-whites undergoing treatment.

One of the superintendents explained: "It is simply too expensive, too risky and too slow. Africans appear to be more susceptible to the effects, and because we treat more Africans than whites, we would have to double our staff if we used anaesthetics."

Returning Gulls Herald Fall

STRAY FEATHERS
harold hosford

Those little knots of Bonaparte's Gulls plying our shores these days are a sure sign that we've got the long side of summer behind us. For nearly a month now their numbers have been slowly increasing as more and more arrive from the northern nesting grounds.

Theirs is a return engagement. Having played a 3-month stand here earlier in the year they are now back to spend the waning days of summer, most of autumn and — for some of them at least — a few days of early winter, with us.

But now, instead of the striking black heads that made them such an easy mark for the birdwatcher in spring, the Bonapartes are sporting a variety of disguises.

Some still have their black heads but they are beginning to show the ravages of post-nuptial moult; others have all-white heads, except for dusky spots behind their eyes; and still others, instead of the immaculate white tails of adults, disport themselves in tails accented with a dark ban near their tips — the mark of youngsters of the year.

But they're all Bonapart's Gulls because, without exception, all carry the trademark of their kind — those glistening white wedge-shaped patches which show so prominently along the outer leading edges of their wings when the birds are flying.

And it was those glistening patches that caught my eye while watching some Bonapartes at Esquimalt lagoon the other day. It seemed that no matter whether the sun was at my back, or shining in my eyes, those white wedges kept picking up the light and flashing and flickering with each wing beat.

There were a score or more coursing back and forth low over the water, presenting a pretty picture with their flashing "lights". But it occurred to me that there might be more to those flashing patches than just the creation of a pretty picture.

For example, when a bird discovered something of interest on or near the surface of the water, it would hover mementarily before dropping to snatch up the morsel. In that moment of hovering, the flickering flashes from the white wing patches seemed to intensify almost as if in their peculiar hovering flight the birds were signalling.

Could it be that other Bonapartes, on seeing the flickering "lights" read something significant into them? Did those feeding Bonapartes inadvertently advertise, by their hovering, flickering, flight, that they had found food — information other Bonapartes might profitably use?

Subsequent events seemed to support these ideas because later, when 4 or 5 Bonapartes began to hover and flicker back and forth over a school of minnows they drew the attention of 40 or 50 more Bonapartes that had been resting out an ebbing tide on a nearby sandbar.

No sooner did the "flicker flight" begin but the sandbar sitters rose, en masse, and headed for the action.

It didn't take a troup that size long to put the minnows in place and soon the scene returned to where I had entered with 40 or 50 gulls at rest and a score or more daintily coursing back and forth over the lagoon.

In this case, the roosting birds had no difficulty seeing the activities of the fishing birds — they were no more than a two-iron shot apart. But, out on the open waters of Juan de Fuca where distances are much greater the flashing "lights" of those hovering wings would be like heliographs signalling to any gull, Bonapartes or otherwise, and to any other fish-eating bird for that matter, that a supply of food had been located and was under attack.

Bonapartes are only one of several kinds of gulls found off our shores which, as adults, are predominately white, and all seem to have the habit of hovering and darting over a school of fish forced to the surface by underwater predators — a habit that has become a universal signal, even to men, that there are fish about.

Iran Jails Greedy Millionaires in Inflation War

By ANDREW BOROWIEC
Washington Post

TEHRAN — After 18 months of high spending thanks to the oil-income bonanza, Iran is reacting to the realization that its economy is under severe strain and that the oil funds are not limitless after all.

Inflation, estimated at between 15 and 25 per cent annually, is just one of the problems after the period of massive loans abroad and multi-million-dollar contracts. To counteract the inflation, the government is closing shops, shutting down profiteers and even jailing millionaire violators.

In the past year, oil production has dropped 22 per cent. If the trend continued — even allowing for an expected 15 per cent rise in the price of oil this fall — Iran may fall some $4 billion short of revenue at the end of the year.

(Financial sources in London said Iran was seeking at least $620 million there to carry out committed projects, according to Agency France-Presse.)

Apparently the government has decided that inflation is the easiest problem to attack and its response has been spectacular. Within a week recently, more than 500 shops were closed, some 8,000merchants charged with profiteering and price violations and six millionaires jailed.

Habib Elghanian, a prominent Tehran plastic industrialist, was arrested July 27 on charges of overpricing his products. Six days later, Mayor Mohamed Mani of Isfahan and Beza Najsafi, director of the Department of Industry and Mines, were sentenced to 18 months' detention for ordering the brick factory they jointly own to sell above officially fixed prices.

During the week of the crackdown, prices of 638 domestic products plunged 5 to 57 per cent. The government is preparing a list of another 1,000 products for price slashes.

If these strong measures fail to bring down the rate of inflation by mid-August, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi has threatened those arrested with military tribunals.

The shah has staked his prestige on bringing down prices particularly of food and other items subsidized by the government.

Although part of the inflation is blamed on massive 40 per cent increases in the prices of imports, much of it is due to profiteering by local merchants.

The next target of the government are Tehran's staggering rents. Foreigners are often asked to pay the equivalent of $1,500 per month for a modest house. They have been promised legal assistance to fight greedy landlords.

Rents are hitting Iranians as hard as they have hit the growing foreign colony.

The more sober internal assessment of Iran's economic realities is accompanied by considerable wavering of foreign confidence in Iran's economic future and a drop in joint deals with foreign firms.

Iran and West Germany did sign a $5.5 billion protocol covering a host of joint ventures. But the bulk of the projects are yet to be worked out in detail.

On paper, Iran has committed some $45 billion in joint development ventures with 35 nations, including $15 billion with the United States. Some $10 billion are earmarked for grants and loans to other developing nations — and here serious cuts are in the offing. Already a number of countries have been warned not to expect much largess from Tehran.

The shah has not, however, indicated any cutback in military spending. It has risen 44 per cent in the last year, to nearly $8 billion — almost half of the $20 billion earned from oil. Iran reportedly ordered $3.3 billion in U.S. arms last year, almost half of U.S. weapons sales abroad.

Negotiations for half a dozen joint ventures between American and Iranian firms have been suspended and the flow of American businessmen to Tehran has subsided in recent weeks.

The opportunities are still here, but voices of caution have had their effect. Iran no longer looms to American business as a land of unlimited opportunity.

Lucrative contracts are increasingly hard to get, the competition is stiff and local red tape harder to cut.

The spectacular rise in oil prices since 1973 has created immense opportunities for Iran and led to the doubling of the expenditure in the current five-year plan to $69 billion.

But also in the past year, imports grew from $6 billion to $11.8 billion. Almost 60 per cent of the increase of money supply took place in the first quarter of the current year, creating serious inflationary pressures.

Earlier this year, the International Monetary Fund warned Iran that a "reduction in the planned level of the government's net domestic expenditure" was essential.

The official aim is to economize through greater efficiency rather than eliminate crucial development projects. But despite official assurances, some projects are being shelved.

Adding to the confused economic picture are transport bottlenecks and a dramatic shortage of manpower. It is estimated that to fulfill the objectives of the five-year plan running into 1978, some 700,000 skilled jobs will have to be filled, many from abroad.

Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida pledged recently that the development plan will not be slowed down. But at the same time he said that priorities are being revised. Government agencies have been orderd to trim their budgets by 20 per cent in some cases and a freeze on hiring of nonessential personnel has been announced.

Foreign firms eyeing Iran's investment possibilities are also concerned by the recent series of restraining measures. One of them is the public ownership law, requiring all major companies to sell 49 per cent of their shares to the public by 1978. As a start, 106 companies have been ordered to go public by next March. They include a dozen ventures with American participation.

Business euphoria was also hit by a number of more cautious appraisals of Iran's future than the optimistic ones which appeared with such profusion earlier this year.

SECOND MORTGAGE

If you have your mind set on the purchase of real estate but do not have enough cash to meet the full price and down payment on the first mortgage, there is a solution. Second mortgages are also available and nothing to be afraid of. The owner may agree to take your promissory note and mortgage for the balance. This mortgage is usually for a smaller amount, and a shorter term than the conventional mortgage.

But no matter what kind of mortgage you arrange, be very clear about its terms and conditions. Many mortgages contain prepayment penalties, which means that if you decide to pay off the mortgage in advance, you have to pay an extra charge. There will also be clauses protecting the lender from your damaging the property or tearing in down. So it's important to read the fine print and understand what it means.

Your Realtor is familiar with these many clauses and can be helpful in assisting you to understand them.

Premier

Premier Cablevision Ltd. reports profit declined 12.8 per cent to a total of $1,936,000 in the six months ended May 31 from $2,221,000 in the same period last year.

Of the $285,000 decline, $170,000 was for the special 10-per-cent income tax surtax that ended May 31.

Sydney Welsh, chairman of the Vancouver-based company, said that while basic revenues from Canadian operations remained steady, subscriber growth is moderate due to the continued slump in housing starts.

He said inflatin and high labor costs further contribute to a reduction in earnings. For similar reasons the company is still showing a net loss in its Welsh communicaions division.

The Irish subsidiaries have felt the effects of the European economic downturn and resulting unemployment, Welsh's report said.

Although the capital building program and subscriber sales continue, they have not yet reached the break-even point, and an operating profit is not anticipated for at least another 12 months under present economic conditons, it said.

HIGH QUADRA — FAMILY LIVING

This 4 bedroom, full basement family home has just been considerably updated — is presently vacant and available for immediate occupancy. Consider these features: large living room with fireplace, guest size dining room, family kitchen with fridge included. Heating is oil fired hot water — carpeting wall-to-wall and lino in kitchen and bathroom. Location is high with some city view. Handy to all conveniences — the lot abounds in plants, shrubs and is oak treed. The rear yard is quite secluded. Believe me, an older updated home in a choice mature area has much more to offer by way of amenities than something brand spanking new in a subdivision that was once a pasture! Consider this new listing at a reasonable asking price of $59,900. This won't last, so hurry!

For appointment to view anytime just call Henderson Realty Ltd., 1010 Blanshard St. Phone 385-9741, ask for Terry, residence 598-1544.

Wagon-Maker's Business Booms

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — For an Old Order Mennonite, Silas Martin, the age of the automobile has not dawned.

It has been 30 years since he started up as a wagon maker and carriage repairer in the nearby community of Heidelberg. He was told the business would never work—not even in the heart of Mennonite country where the wagon is an accepted way of life.

Not only has his business survived for three decades, but it is gaining popularity in a day when Canada's highways are increasingly crowded with automobiles.

Once people had buggies rotting in their barns, but now collectors are putting new life into my business," said Mr. Martin.

As antiques have gained in popularity, the spirit of past craftsmanship has lived on in Mr. Martin's business.

Now the world outside the closely-knit Mennonite community has brought new customers. A year ago Mr. Martin and his three sons began building copies of the historic Conestoga wagon which brought early settlers to the region from Pennsylvania.

Now Mr. Martin is working on the last of 11 wagons for the Ponderosa Steak House chain.

Aaron Miller, Toronto regional advertising manager for Ponderosa, said the wagons cost $1,000 each but "are worth every cent."

"What began as an experiment for us has received fantastic public response," he said.

Ponderosa has won awards at the Niagara Falls' Blossom Festival and in Regina for the best commercial float. The float used wagons manufactured in Mr. Martin's barn-workshop.

Mr. Martin and his sons buy the undercarriages and install the box and covering made of pine, the Conestoga wagons come complete with feed boxes in the back for horses.

Weighing 1,000 to 1,100 pounds, the wagons take the Martin craftsmen two days to make.

Mr. Martin has electricity in his home but prefers to depend on the cheaper diesel-run engine for the tools in his workshop. He makes some of his own spokes and wheels but finds parts difficult to acquire.

"I have to keep between $5,000 and $1,000 of parts in hand at all times for my repair business and most of them come from the United States," he said.

Although there are only a handful of wagon makers in North America, Mr. Martin's main work still consists of repairs and maintenance to the buggies in Mennonite country.

Although he does not own a car, Mr. Martin has no objection to them as long as they do not hit him. He has good reason to feel this way as a motorist recently rammed his buggy from behind.

Uninjured but shaken, he had to repair his own buggy and still is waiting for a settlement from the insurance company.

Shark Scare In Canada

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Parlee Beach, a popular summer resort on Northumberland Strait near Shediac, 14 miles east of here, still is crowded this summer.

But swimmers aren't venturing out as far, and they are watching the surface of the water more closely than ever for the dreaded triangular dorsal fin. Canadians too are tingling with at least some of the shark-horror that has gripped the United States. It's all because of the movie Jaws and the gore-spattered realism which made millions almost feel the mangling crunch of a man-eater's teeth.

The Canadian bathers can relax with the knowledge that nobody has ever been killed directly by a shark in Canadian waters. But they aren't completely home free. A few attacks are on record, and some man-eaters have been sighted.

Sharks are not uncommon off Canada's East Coast, but the vast majority are species considered relatively harmless.

However, individual specimens of the white shark, most dreaded of the man-eaters, have been found in the Bay of Fundy and in Northumberland Strait as close as 20 miles from the crowded beaches of Shediac.

ATTACKS DORY

The most famous shark incident in Canada occurred off Cape Breton on July 9, 1953, when a large fish attacked a 14-foot dory carrying two men. The fish smashed into the boat, punching a 14-inch hole in its bottom and dumping the two men overboard. One of the men drowned.

A tooth found embedded in the hull identified the fish as a white shark, estimated to be 12 feet long.

Another incident occurred in 1968 in Cobequid Bay, the almost landlocked body of water at the farthest end of the Bay of Fundy near Truro, N.S.

It's Britain's Turn to Juggle Arab Terrorist 'Hot Potato'

LONDON — Britain's home secretary, Roy Jenkins, and foreign secretary, James Callaghan, are juggling a political hot potato similar to the one that recently caused such a storm in Canada.

They have to decide whether to give entry visas to four representatives of an Arab terrorist group invited to attend as observers at a meeting of 1,200 delegates from 75 countries to the conference of the International Parliamentary Union.

Indications are that visas will be given to the four observers nominated by the Palestine National Council, which is the political arm of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

But angry British MPs gathered about 100 signatures from members of all parties in the House of Commons to a commons motion condemning the visit in the closing hours of the parliamentary session.

The growing controversy in Britain surrounds the feeling that the IPU disobeyed its own rules and bent before the pressure of Arab and other third-world countries to give the terrorists observer status.

Reports from Beirut indicate that Arab groups are planning to bring various types of pressure to bear on Britain if it does not issue the entry visas.

A confidential memorandum prepared in the home office with foreign office help has been sent to senior members of the IPU saying that the home secretary can give no assurance "that they would be granted nor could he say that they would be refused."

But a home office source said the visas probably would be issued.

The conference opens in London Sept. 2 and closes Sept. 13. The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will break their holiday at Balmoral to conduct the official opening in Westminster Hall.

While entering London Airport, the Palestinians may be able to view at first hand the extraordinary security precautions that have been mounted several times in recent months to thwart expected rocket attacks on civilian airlines by Palestinian terrorists.

And while at Westminster, they will be able to inspect the still-visible damage inflicted on the ancient hall by another terrorist organization, the Provisional IRA.

Two leading Conservative MPs have spoken out against the visit.

Teddy Taylor, an influential Scottish member, said:

"I just don't feel that terrorists or their representatives have a place in our parliamentary conference. Terrorists are concerned with overthrowing democracies, not supporting them."

Mark Carlisle, a former home office minister in a Conversative government, said:

"It's scandalous that a terrorist organization should be invited."

The constitutional issue that bothers the British MPs arose during the meeting last April in Colombo, Sri Lanka, of the IPU.

A letter from the Palestine National Council was read to the executive meeting seeking observer status at the London meeting. Tom Williams, the Labor MP and barrister who headed the British contingent in Colombo, protested that IPU rules only permitted attendance by representative governments.

This stand was supported by Belgium, Italy, West Germany, Ireland and France and won the day in the executive session. But at a full meeting Syria and Egypt led a large group in supporting the proposal and the British initiative was defeated by 53 votes to 34, with 13 abstentions.

British MPs now say they will oppose a Swedish move to amend the articles of the IPU to make it easier in future to invite observer groups that represent no established government.

SCHREYER STUDIES GAS PRICE FREEZE

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer says Manitoba is considering imposing a 45-day extension on the freeze on the wholesale price of gasoline, although he says in the long run it might be futile.

He said Friday the government can hold off on a decision until Aug. 15 — the date when the federal price freeze is lifted, and when gasoline prices are expected to rise an adtional five cents a gallon.

However, Schyreyer did not rule out the possibility of such a freeze later if there was evidence of inequitable pricing in the country.

The premier said the futility might come about if the oil companies decided to recoup their losses as result of any freeze by charging higher prices when it ended.

CLEU Factor In Drug Deaths

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald has attributed several recent drug-related killings to the activities of the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit.

"I think it's got something to do with the police and the CLEU efforts we're making in terms of shrinking the drug supply — the heroin supply particularly," said Macdonald.

"We're bringing great pressure on the suppliers of heroin in the Lower Mainland. As a result of that kind of pressure you have people cheating on one another to a greater scale than before.

"But our CLEU organization has been making progress and this is putting intolerable pressure upon some of the people — unfortunately mostly little people — in the drug community."

The strangled body of Gerald Russel Boyko, 29, long known by police as a drug pusher, was found Thursday at the end of a long deserted road in Burnaby. It was the third murder this week.

Valentine Lock Wurtz, 26, the week's second victim, was found shot to death Tuesday in Vancouver's Stanley Park. The first victim was Robert Marshall, 25, who had been strangled not far from where Boyko's body was found.

Three people taken into custody earlier this week in connection with the murders of Marshall and Wurtz are still in police hands, but charged with an unrelated offence.

Police also say the shotgun slaying in Burnaby on July 18 of James Cummings, 27, may also be tied in with the current murders.

Cummings was shot a month after he was released from serving four years in the B.C. Penitentiary for manslaughter.

India Nudging China Into Sea

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Geologists say satellite pictures indicate India is pushing China into the Pacific, and that this sideways shoving might account for China's unusual pattern of earthquakes.

The earth scientists working at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) say the Indian subcontinent is nudging northward, pressing against Eurasia.

Caught in the squeeze, China is moving eastward at more than an inch a year, they say.

In an article published in the Aug. 8 issue of the journal science, the geologists say this might account for China's earthquakes being spread over a region hundreds of miles wide instead of along much-narrower areas of fault lines, as is common elsewhere.

The report was written by Peter Molnir, assistant professor of geology at MIT, and Paul Tapponier, a visiting research fellow at MIT who has since returned to the University of Montpelier in France. They studied photographs taken by the U.S. Earth Resources Technology Satellite and other data.

The popular theory of "plate tectonics" says the outer part of the earth is made up of rigid plates of rock about 40 to 50 miles thick.

As these plates slowly move together or apart — shifting continents — the upper part of the earth's crust is deformed as the boundaries and occasional earthquakes result along these faults.

Molnar said in an interview that some Chinese earthquake zones are much wider than faults found between normal plates.

"As India moves northward toward Europe and Siberia, the area in between which includes Mongolia and much of China does not behave as if it is a rigid plate," he said.

"This area seems more pliable and it distorts with pressure," Molnar said. The unusual Chinese earthquake zones lie in these pliable areas that are being pinched, he said.

"The squeezing has two effects," he said. "It piles up material to make mountains and it pushes other material out of the way. Our theory is that China is being pushed out of the way as India approaches."

Business Manager Urged for Courts

VANCOUVER (CP) — The official publication of the British Columbia Federation of Peace Officers says that operation of Vancouver's court systems should be taken out of the hands of judges and be given to a business consultant.

An editorial in The Thin Blue Line blames a rapidly-increasing backlog of cases — now about 5,000 and growing by 100 a week — on a lack of business sense by judges.

The business consultant, it says, should run the courts and "when he says a trial goes on, it goes on . . . everyone complies."

The editorial also suggests that more prosecutors be hired, should be paid more money and given time to properly prepare their cases.

Regional courts should be set up at various city locations to handle petty crimes to stop cluttering the main provincial courts with "junk cases," the editorial adds.

It says that judges, defence lawyers, prosecutors, as well as police and witnesses should be made to get to court on time, and "once the court has commenced keep it moving until 5 p.m. with a reasonable time off for lunch."

The editorial writer pointed out that during the month of June, the longest the judges sat on the average was slightly more than four hours a day. Their low average was 2½ hours a day. And that, the writers said, was a good figure compared with May when the low average was just more than 1½ hours a day.

Union, Officer Must Pay $5,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — Punitive damages of $5,000 were awarded in British Columbia Supreme Court Friday against a Teamster local and its secretary for attempting to stop customers from dealing with a trucking company.

Mr. Justice J. G. Gould made the award to Johnston Terminals and Storage Ltd., which sued the Teamster Local 351 and its secretary John J. Brown.

Johnston sued for damages for alleged wrongful acts carried out maliciously against the company and 13 subsidiaries who were also plaintiffs in the action.

Mr. Justice Gould said the essence of the action was that Local 351 unlawfully tried in its labor negotiations with various Johnston group customers to persuade them to sign a clause agreeing not to allow any freight deliveries to or from their respective premises by Johnston Terminals Ltd. or any of its subsidiaries.

He said that 15 witnesses called by Johnston said that Local 351 requested that the clause be put into each contract during collective bargaining.

This was virorously rejected by most employers and was not included in any agreements, Mr. Justice Gould continued.

He said Brown and the local showed "a cynical disregard for another's rights, accompanied by a truculent breach of the law as to those rights, all in furtherance of one's own aspirations, is a proper case for punitive damages."

CREWS TO LAY HYDRO CABLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crews will begin laying two new B.C. Hydro underwater power cables to Vancouver Island this weekend, the company said Friday.

Gulf of Georgia Towing Co. barges will begin the first phase of the job, connecting the mainland just north of Roberts Bank to Galiano Island, either Saturday or Sunday night depending on weather and water conditions, a press release stated.

The twin four-in cables under the Strait of Georgia will be the longest oil-insulated underwater transmission lines in the world, said the release.

Upon completion in 1976 the line will provide an additional 237,000 kilowatts of power for customers on Vancouver Island.

Non-Cable TV For P. Alberni

The affluent society is alive and well and living in Port Alberni, says an executive of B.C. Television.

Earlier this week, the Canadian Radio and Television Commission approved an application by CHEK-TV Victoria, a subsidiary of BCTV, to rebroadcast its programs from Port Alberni.

In a roundabout way, the affluence of people in Port Alberni in particular and B.C. in general was responsible for the application in the first place, said Ernie Rose, BCTV's vice president in charge of engineering.

Rose said people in the Port Alberni area can receive CHEK clearly if they are on a cable system, but without cable the reception is plagued by ghosting — shadowy outlines around objects.

So people hook up their color televisions to the cable system, but most have more than one set and there is a "crying demand" for off-air transmission without cable, said Rose.

The rebroadcast station in Port Alberni, to be built on the top of Stamp Mountain at a cost of about $28,000, will allow residents to receive CHEK programs without a cable, Rose said, making the 60 per cent of the people who have more than one television set happy.

"I guess you have to put it down to the affluent society," said Rose.

Depending on the winter weather, the transmitter will be finished either late this fall or early next spring.

Okanagan Valley Cherry Threat

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial agriculture departmetn scientists are searching for a method of curbing the spread of a virus in the Okanagan Valley that virtually wiped out cherry production in the Creston area 30 years ago.

Trees infected with little cherry disease produce small, unmarketable cherries and the only known method of stopping the disease is to destroy the infected trees.

Harry O'Reilly, head of the agriculture department's plant pathology branch, said Friday that in additon to the 273 infected trees found in the Penticton orchard, 127 more infected trees were discovered in 10 different nearby locations.

"We agree with the farmers that removal is a very crude method of control," O'Reilly said, "but there is a lag of one to two years between the time of the tree's infection and when the first visible symptoms appear."

The disease was first discovered near Creston in the early 1940s and within years wiped out all cherry orchards in the area, O'Reilly said. The area still does not produce marketable cherries, he added.

O'Reilly said the virus was probably carried by insects although it was likely first introduced when the Japanese flowering cherry, a tree known to be a carrier of the disease was planted.

He said 16 trees were removed last year from the orchard with the major outbreak this year. The trees with visible infections this year were probably infected last year but went undiscovered.

Little cherry disease was first noticed in the Okanagan Valley in 1969, O'Reilly said.

B.C. Tel Earnings Reported at $8.4M

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Telephone Co. said in its quarterly report Friday net earnings for the six months ended June 30 were $8,422,000 or 45 cents a share, compared with earnings of $8,204,000 or 51 cents a share for the corresponding period of 1974.

In the report to shareholders, J. Ernest Richardson, chairman and chief executive officer of B.C. Telephone, said operating expenses in the second quarter showed a lesser rate of increase than a similar period in 1974.

"However, in spite of our best efforts, expenses for the first half of the year showed a 17-per-cent increase over 1974's first half while our revenues rose by only 15 per cent," Richardson said.

The report said operating revenues were $85.6 million for the three-month period ended June 30, an increase of 13.3 per cent from the corresponding period of 1974. Operating expenses were $62.9 million for the quarter, a 13.7-per-cent increase from last year.

Richardson said company directors have approved, for immediate filing, a preliminary prospectus for the purpose by the Canadian Transport Commission, will be used to repay short-term loans of about $45 million, he said.

Riding Clinic Set

One of the world's greatest women riders and instructors, Lady Mary Rose Williams, will be in Victoria next week to instruct one of five clinics to be held in B.C. this month for pony club members.

The three-day clinic at the Heaniad Stables on Mt. Newton X Roads, will be held Saturday, Aug. 16 to Monday and is open to any pony club member.

The course will deal with jumping of horse and rider; course construction and design; and the art of teaching.

The clinic is supported by a grant from the B.C. Horse Owners Association to the B.C. Regional Branch of Pony Clubs.

Lady Mary Rose was a member of the British Show Jumping team from 1951 to 1964.

— She has been teaching pony clubs for the past 20 years and has taught and judged in many countries. This is her first trip to Victoria.

Pony Club membership is open to anyone between the ages of 7 and 21.

More information on next week's clinic may be obtained by calling 652-2616 or 652-1595.

$6,000 FEDERAL GRANT

He's Serious About UFO Sights

EDMONTON (CP) — People who sight unidentified flying objects (UFOs) often get upset about it, and part of John Musgrave's task as a UFO researcher is to convince them they are not losing their minds.

But the 34-year-old university instructional developer plans to do a lot more than offer counsel with his $6,000 grant from the federal government.

Ever since the early 1950s when Mr. Musgrave saw a bright, star-like object which split into blue and orange spheres that took off in different directions, he's been a member of the scientific community which takes UFO reports seriously. That community, he said, has grown in stature in recent years, unknown to most members of the general public.

A 1973 survey showed about 10 per cent of the adult American population had seen UFOs and while four out of five sightings could be explained, the remainder could not. It leaves people sincerely frightened, especially when they are told they are mere perpetrators of a hoax, Mr. Musgrave said.

So in the process of spending Canadian tax money ferretting out historical reports of UFOs and talking to people who have seen something strange in the sky, he plans to explain to them that they are not alone and the vivid experience they have had is consistent with what has happened to a good many other people.

Studying UFOs, he said, amounts to being part of a new science which may provide a revolutionary way of looking at the world and force all of us to acquire a new framework for our own view of things around us.

He finds the whole field intriguing, especially since no one knows exactly how to go about studying it. This led him to decide on a historical look.

He plans to begin in earnest next November when his teaching contract expires. He will spend his time in newspaper libraries and government research centres as well as interviewing those who have seen UFOs, compiling and analysing reports until his money runs out. The $6,000 is about half of what he asked for in his grant application.

As a member of about a dozen UFO clubs and societies, a contributor to periodicals on UFOs, including the Canadian UFO Report and a student of scientific history, he has heard a lot of theories about UFOs and drawn together some of the common elements of sightings.

Most UFO buffs take it for granted that flying saucers and the like are from other planets with civilizations billions of years older than ours, at least as a working theory. But there are also suggestions that what is seen is something created by the human mind, and viewed in terms of technology as we know it or can imagine it, or as visible evidence of a supernatural world existing on earth of which we are unaware.

Mr. Musgrave also speculates that there may be several different sources for UFOs, including natural phenomena that science does not yet understand. The fascination is in the discovery of the answers.

UFOs are usually sighted in rural areas, with Alberta an especially fertile field, often on Wednesday nights and usually between 2 and 3 a.m. or in early evening. Summer seems to produce more reports than winter, which might be explained by more people being outdoors in warmer weather.

Most recent reports have been of circular objects of various colors, dropping out of the sky and flying back up after scooping up samples of earth. They are reported to have chased cars and some people have said they have been taken aboard space craft and examined by the occupants, which are usually described as about one metre tall and either human or robot-like in appearance. The vehicles also make sounds, everything from beeps to lightning-like cracks. They have been plotted on radar screens. Some have said they were temporarily blinded by the intensity of the light emitted from the craft.

Mr. Musgrave cautioned, however, against trying to see patterns to sightings at this stage. The research is simply not well enough developed yet. That's part of the study he plans to do.

Before The Judge

A 24-year-old American who stole a Bentley car from a downtown Victoria street early Wednesday was sentenced to seven days in jail and now faces a deportation hearing sometime within the next week.

Thomas Lafayette Scott of Stockton, Calif. pleaded guilty to the theft when he appeared before Judge Fred Green in Victoria provincial court Friday.

Prosecutor Barry Mah Ming said Scott was stopped by police at 12:30 a.m. as he was driving the car south on Douglas without headlights on.

Defence lawyer Robert Buffam told the court Scott had been drinking immediately before the offence and has had an alcohol problem since the age of 18.

Buffam said the accused came out of the Bastion Inn, 1140 Government, saw the Bentley parked across the street, got into it and "when people began to walk by he decided he had better make it look like his."

"So he started the engine and drove off. But he couldn't find the headlight switch."

Green imposed the jail term to impress upon Scott "that car theft is not tolerated in Canada."

* * *

A presentence report was ordered for Lora Pattullo Bethell, 20, who pleaded guilty to breaking and entering and theft at a home at 2450 Cotswold Road.

Bethell and Randall Kevin Stauffer, both of 779 Market, had been jointly charged on the break-in, but crown entered a stay of proceedings for Stauffer after Bethell admitted guilt.

Mah Ming quoted Bethell as having told police: "It was all my idea . . . I went into the house myself."

* * *

"Taking into account your youth and situation, the fines are lower than usual . . . but mind you, you now have a criminal record," Green told 19-year-old Jacqueline Down, who pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana and hashish.

Federal drug prosecutor Jane Morly said drug squad members raided Down's home at 427 Linden Tuesday evening. They found 27 marijuana plants and seven pipes containing hashish.

Green fined Down $75 on the possession of marijuana charge and $50 on the hashish charge.

Gary Howard Grant, 19, address not known, was fined $250 for attempting to steal a tape deck from a car in an underground parking area at 905 Esquimalt Aug. 3.

Grant pleaded guilty Tuesday.

The youth was charged after the owner of the car and a police officer saw him enter the vehicle.

Grant told them he was "looking for matches" but later admitted he was trying to steal the tape deck.

He said he had just been released from the army, had no money and would have to wait until Sept. 1 for his severance pay.

Dennis John Kingsjohn, 18, of 3686 McIvor was sentenced to four months in jail for dangerous driving in Saanich March 21.

Judge Edmond St. Jorre imposed the sentence after Kingsjohn pleaded guilty.

The accused led police on an 11-mile chase at speeds up to 85 miles per hour and went through four red lights and five stop signs.

St. Jorre also banned Kingsjohn from driving for two years.

Patty's Bill With FBI About $500,000

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It has cost the FBI an estimated half million dollars to look for Patricia Hearst, a top official says.

The newspaper heiress disappeared early in 1974 when she was abducted by — and later joined — the Symbionese Liberation Army. She is still missing.

Eugene Walsh, assistant director of the FBI's administrative division, told a congressional hearing Thursday "the principal expenditure has been manpower."

"I would guess off the top of my head that it has been about $500,000 at least."

Juvenile Act Frustrates Court System

By HOI-YIN DER
Times Staff

There is little a judge can do with hard-core juvenile delinquents in B.C., and nobody really knows what to do about it, says Allison Brunet, member of Attorney-General Alex Macdonald's provincial action team.

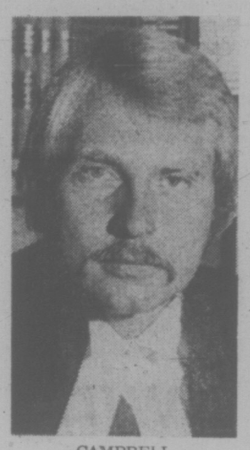
Macdonald recently formed the team to bring about the implementation of the Berger Commission recommendations on family courts and juvenile delinquency. He has also approved in principle the return of power to regional Crown prosecutors to transfer some juveniles to adult court and has promised "secure facilities" for some juvenile delinquents.

"But I certainly do not want anyone to think everything is going to happen overnight," Brunet said during an interview from Vancouver.

She added that many people are "neglecting the fact that all sorts of things are being and have been done in this area."

Yet many others said they find themselves continually frustrated in attempting to work within what one judge called the "strict confines" of the Juvenile Delinquents Act.

There are very few options open to a judge in the sentencing of juveniles. He can fine the child up to a maximum of $25, place him on probation or under the care of the superintendent of child welfare.



CAMPBELL
. . . broadens options

Family court judge Douglas Campbell said he would like to see the "spectrum of options broadened."

"The policy as it exists works well as a general policy, but it is not brought home to the specific child (the repeater) and therefore works to the detriment of that child," Campbell said.

The judge emphasized, however, that 75 per cent of juveniles who commit criminal offences are disposed of outside the court and rarely return on further offences.

But the return rate among the 25 per cent who make it to court is high, said family court prosecutor Trudi Brown.

"We watch them return time and time again," Brown said. "It's frustrating, but there's little we can do about it."

She said after a child realizes he can commit one or two criminal acts for which he receives virtually no punishment, he will continue committing such acts and make mockery of the system throughout.

Campbell agreed "it's all very frustrating . . . but we don't feel defeated. We in this business are pretty thick-skinned."

Brown said one juvenile, recently raised to adult court, had the "startling" record of 82 convictions of breaking and entering and theft related offences in juvenile court.

"I think 82 is the all-time record in this court, but I have about five kids reaching that point and I fear they may soon surpass it," said the prosecutor. "Only last week we had one 15-year-old boy charged in connection with 37 break-ins in the Greater Victoria area."

Macdonald's promise of containment-treatment centres for specifically this type of delinquent has raised much controversy. Some agree that this is a move in the positive direction, others disagree and still others are non-committed.

Judge Campbell would not take a stand on containment or non-containment but said "the announcement about secure facilities will certainly broaden the options open to a judge."

On the other hand, prosecutor Brown said the announcement "indicates the courts will at last be able to consider the protection of the public as opposed to the rehabilitation of the child who continues to commit crimes, simply refusing to participate in rehabilatative programs."

Saanich police chief Bob Peterson agreed.

"Repeaters are certainly a source of frustration to police and the courts, and in the case of the hardcore delinquent, we do require some sort of custodial facility."

Peterson added that he is "quite convinced street-level methods for dealing with first and second time offenders are achieving good results."

"I oppose incarceration of any sort," said Bonner, of the youth services branch of the department of Human Resources.

Jails, he said, are schools for crime.

"Attendance centres, group homes and counselling are much more effective . . . in the long run we may not have as many hardened criminals because the kids have been kept in the community and have learned to take some responsibility for themselves," Bonner said.

STANTON
. . . don't blame parents

But chief probation officer Edward Stanton said he feels "kids can also learn and do learn a great deal of crime on the streets."

Stanton said a major fault with probation and keeping the child on the street is the central premise that parents are incapable of counselling and that probation officers and social workers are the only qualified people.

"It is time society realized no parent has a degree for being a parent and you cannot blame them for their children's delinquencies," Stanton said. "Many children in fact put parents through the gates of hell."

He said treatment based on the tenet parents are constantly in the wrong will only perpetuate further juvenile delinquency.

Brunet, however, said that adults as a group are to blame.

"Kids do accept adults as learning models and until adults begin to set better examples, juvenile delinquency will continue," she said.

"And prisons are not the answer . . . we haven't done a whole lot for adults in jail so what makes us think we will be able to accomplish anything by incarcerating juveniles."

Projects Viewed By Award Jury

Two Greater Victoria projects were viewed by a five-person jury on Friday as part of a cross-Canada tour to select winners of the national Vincent Massey Awards.

The two local projects are the lower causeway promenade in the Inner Harbor and the Gorge Road improvement site.

The awards, presented every other year, are provided jointly by the Vincent massey Foundation, the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the Canada Council.

This year's awards will be for "excellence in the urban environment". They will be presented by Governor-General Jules Leger in Ottawa in October.

Allan O'Brien, professor of political science at the University of London in Ontario and a former mayor of Halifax, N.S. heads the five-person jury.

Also on they jury are Clifford Wyens, a Regina architect; June Rowlands, who will be a Liberal candidate in the next Ontario election; Jean-Claud Marsan, director of the University of Montreal's faculty of architecture, and Shirley Chan, a community affairs consultant in Vancouver and Ottawa.

The jury, which started its tour in Halifax on Aug. 1 will judge 31 projects across the country.

Six of these are in Vancouver. They are Gastown, Arbutus Village, a housing and commercial development; The De Cosmos co-operative housing complex; Cloverdale, an urban renewal project in Surrey; Mount Pleasant park, which is a Vancouver mini park, and Strathcona.

Miss Chan will exclude herself from the jury when it judges the Strathcona project today because she was one of those that initiated the program.

Strathcona is a residential community in downtown Vancouver, consisting of old houses of between 50 and 70 years of age that have been renovated. Most of the occupants are Chinese.

Hospital Beehive: Who's on Guard?

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Do patients in hospital get the care they should? Are their problems diagnosed accurately, treated consistently? Are all those operations necessary? Is anybody watching?

Royal Jubilee Hospital has just been granted accreditation for another three years, meaning an outside inspection team has found the hospital meeting standards of the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation.

Without accreditation, a hospital is in deep trouble. So are its patients.

Among comments in Jubilee's accreditation report, prepared by a doctor from Toronto: "the medical staff is commended on the excellence of the medical review procedures currently being undertaken."

It's a pat on the back for a watchdog system Jubilee introduced 18 months ago which uses six rotating teams of doctor volunteers, a data analyst and a computer to monitor quality of patient care and the efficient use of just about everything in the hospital.

A hospital is like a beehive—patients, doctors, paramedics constantly flow in and out and a bewildering variety of examinations, tests, operations and treatment go on inside. Jubilee admits 24,000 patients a year. Is there any way to keep track of quality?

Vital to the Jubilee system is a computer service based in Ann Arbor, Mich., for hospitals throughout North America. What that service does is gobble up a constant flow of information from patients' charts and spew out details which show how each hospital compares with national and even international averages.

If, for example, diabetics treated at Jubilee, are getting some test fewer times or staying longer or in any way deviating from the experience at 200 other Canadian hospitals, the computer sheets show it. It's like a flashing light, telling the hospital administration and doctors to take a closer look.

Dr. Ray LeHuquet, medical director, said Friday that the hospital's medical staff, meaning the 150 or so doctors who have admitting privileges at the hospital, share the task of reviewing abnormal situations uncovered by the computer.

Divisions of medicine, surgery, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, general practice and psychiatry each have a review team of four to six doctors who serve for a year at a time.

They meet at least monthly and among their duties, closely examine the history of every death in the hospital, review the work of all new doctors for a year as well as cases of any doctor whose work they feel needs watching. The team can call a doctor in to explain any practice they think is questionable. But any disciplining is done by the medical staff executive.

The review teams are also drafting standards for diagnosing and treating particular diseases. What tests, for example, should be a part of tracking diabetes? What steps in treatment should routinely follow?

After these standards have been thrashed over and accepted at medical staff meetings, they serve as a yardstick against which care provided in any case can be measured.

The teams also monitor hospital services and how they were used. Was the admission of that patient necessary? Why the delay in getting x-rays or other tests done? Were there too many tests?

Le Huquet said one objective of the system is educating doctors who need help, not punishing them. It's a system devised by the doctors themselves and it's working well, he said, because they are enthusiastic about it.

Hearing 12 Years After Murder

A special witness hearing will be held in Victoria juvenile court next week for a 28-year-old man who has been in Essondale mental hospital since 1963 following the shooting death of a Saanich couple.

The man was committed to mental hospital by provincial cabinet order March 19, 1963 about five weeks after police discovered the bodies of George Bickford, 39, and his wife Helen, 43, shot to death in their home at 3625 Melcroft.

The man was 16 at the time and thus was charged with "a delinquency, to wit, murder." Since the charge is still in existence, the man is being returned to juvenile court.

The hearing is required under a 1972 provincial government policy which calls for infrequent hearings for those held in custody in mental hospitals.

The Bickfords were found dead Feb. 13 and police believed they had been killed two days earlier. Bickford had been shot once in the right eye with a .22 calibre rifle; Mrs. Bickford had been shot four times in the face.

On April 19 a coroner's jury named the man as the killer. During the inquest a Saanich police officer read from what he described as a confession which gave a motive and full details of the shooting.

POLICE SEEK SILVER OWNER

Victoria police are attempting to trace the owner of 95 pieces of silver plate cutlery found in a brown paper bag in Beacon Hill Park this morning.

Police said Donald Skuse of 978 Heywood was walking in the park when he spotted the bag partially hidden among rocks and brush near a playing field.

The cutlery is of two Community plate patterns and includes an antique souvenir silver spoon from Boise City, Idaho, dated 1892.

Vandals Hit St. Alban's

The St. Alban's Anglican Church at Ryan and Belmont was vandalized early Thursday and more than $600 worth of religious items stolen, Victoria police reported Friday.

Police said the stolen items included three frontal altar cloths, two brass candlesticks, two vases, a cope, a silver baptismal bowl, a silver chalice, a silver plate, two cruets, a silver tray, an alms dish, as well as ministerial clothing, a bible and a church chequebook.

Two hours after the theft was discovered on Friday, a 20-year-old Cowichan man was arrested attempting to cash one of the cheques at a Yates Street store.

Police said the man was wearing some of the ministerial clothing and was carrying the Bible. He said he found them near the church.

He was charged with attempting to obtain goods by false pretence and obtaining a meal by fraud.

Add Drivers' Adeptness to Victoria's Virtues

Now perhaps, Jack willing, we might be permitted to tack on one more virtue that helps make this beautiful Island city so unique.

That, of course, is driving, or rather the courtesy and adeptness with which, in comparison with many other cities, Victorians handle their vehicles.

Like Jack, I too have lived in several of the world's big cities, in London, in Sydney, in the Iranian capital of Tehran, and in Vancouver for a couple of years before making that big decision and setting sail across the Strait.

I have visited, too, many other places like Singapore, Manila, Bangkok and Hong Kong and often found the locals, just like the Tehranis, regarded cars as kind of fun things to tear around wildly in; and signs and traffic lights as jokes.

These, as I said, are big cities. But I have seen many cities of comparable size with Victoria, like Wellington and Christchurch in New Zealand, where the driving is not as orderly and safe as it is here.

I would never have dreamed of buying a bicycle while in Vancouver. Yet I have pedalled with gay abandon since being on the Island and so far, touch wood, have suffered no more than a few scratches when knocked off my bike by a seven-year-old, whose machine had high-rise handlebars and a banana seat.

This too, then, is one of the virtues of paradise. And as an added bonus we hear that we are less likely to be creamed by a runaway postal van that our compatriots across the water. And that Greater Victoria's postal van drivers are less likely to be killed or maimed while bringing all those letters you've been waiting for.

It seems like the other drivers over here, Victoria's postal people handle their vans in a better and more moderate way than they do over on the Lower Mainland.

Right now, a special nine-member inquiry committee is conducting an investigation — demanded by the Vancouver local of the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada — into the safety of the vans used across the country following the deaths of three drivers in three weeks.

In fact, Corporal Gordon Corsan of the B.C. Police College's driver training section and Stuart Richardson of the B.C. Safety Council's professional drivers' school spent Thursday weaving in and out and driving round and round testing the postal vans out at the old airport site at Boundary Bay.

One or two interesting things turned up.

Driver Corsan, after making more than 10 test runs, described what it's like handling a postal van, rather poetically when he said:

"You get the feeling while driving that you are sitting alone on a stool in a large auditorium and there is an earthquake. In other words you don't know which way the vehicle is going when it is pushed beyond its capabilities."

But that is only one remark and by no means conclusive.

Inquiry board chairman Joe Farley admits it is too early to tell whether it was the drivers or the vans that were the major contributors to the fatal accidents. And he estimates it will be some time before a decision is brought down, a decision that could affect the whole postal delivery system across the country.

One driver was killed while attempting to get back in his runaway van and the other two died after being thrown out when their vans were struck on the side and flipped over. There were two other recent accidents also involving postal vans but the drivers weren't hurt.

One theory is that it's not the vans at all, as there were three different types involved in the three fatal accidents, but the lack of caution by young relief drivers in Vancouver that is to blame.

In Victoria, there are far fewer young, inexperienced drivers in the postal service and there has not been one serious accident since the vans were introduced into service over here in 1961. There are now about 100 vehicles on the roads of Greater Victoria.

I talked to Buz Sawyer, the Post Office's public affairs officer for Vancouver Island. He was on holiday but still took time for a chat.

"All the vans are equipped with sliding doors and some have seat belts," Buz said. "The drivers are told to close the doors and the ones that have seat belts are told to put them on. If a driver has a short run, there is a tendency to leave the door open, but most drivers here are careful and shut the door."

President Bill Steele of the LCUC's Local 11 was on holiday, too, but at Postal Station D out on the old Island Highway I found Local secretary Ches Spencer, who said the union here had experienced no problems with the vans.

Spencer . . . not like driving sports car

"You've got to drive them carefully, of course," Ches said before heading off on a mail run. "You can't corner easily with them like you're driving a sports car.

"I'm very pleased with our drivers over here, they're very safety conscious," Spencer added. "It's possible there's a problem in Vancouver with inexperienced drivers.

"Vancouver had a staff turnover of more than 60 per cent last year, which was the highest in Canada.

"The staff is much more stable over here and if you looked at the seniority lists you'd find that most of the drivers have been at it eight or nine years.

"There's no substitute for experience when it comes to driving," said Ches kind of wisely. "Take a look at the Indianapolis 500 and you'll see most of the drivers are 40 or over."

Police to Vote On New Offer

Victoria city policemen will vote Tuesday on a new contract offer from the police board which has been recommended for acceptance by the union's negotiating committee.

Details of the new offer made at a negotiation meeting Friday have not been released, but it is believed the contract would provide wages similar to, if not slightly higher than, salaries provided in the recent Saanich police contract.

A Saanich first-class constable, the key classification, now earns $16,200 a year.

Victoria police had originally asked for parity with policemen on the Lower Mainland where a first-class constable earns $16,512 a year.

DEFENCE COULD GIVE SHAMROCKS THE EDGE

Victoria coach Archie Browning believes past history won't have anything to do with the outcome of the Western Lacrosse Association playoff between his Shamrocks and Coquitlam Adanacs.

"I expect it will be a tough series," he said recently, "but I don't believe the teams' successes at home during the regular season will be a big factor for the series."

The two clubs open their best-of-five, semi-final tonight at Victoria's Memorial Arena and if past performances count for anything, the Irish will take the first game.

The reason behind that is simple. The two clubs split their six regular-season games with each team winning all three contests on its home floor.

There was a difference in the margins, however. In Coquitlam, the Adanacs outscored the Irish 46-35 for the three games. In Victoria, it was 68-30 in the Shamrocks' favor.

And that is where Browning is basing his hopes. He expects the Shamrocks to continue their wide edge over the Adanacs at home but to have more success in Coquitlam.

"In all three games there (Coquitlam) we failed to play three good periods," he said.

One edge the Shamrocks had over the Adanacs in the regular season was on defence. The second-place Irish allowed a league low 269 goals while the fourth-place Adanacs gave up 383.

Game time tonight is 8 p.m.

Dale's Putter Cold

By ROB MATTHEWS

OAKFIELD, N.S. (CP) — Debbie Massey of Bethlehem, Pa., finally put her putter to work Friday and emerged with a four-shot lead in the Canadian women's amateur golf championships.

Miss Massey, the 24-year-old defending champion, had a round of 75 Friday, including a three-under 35 on the back nine, to take the lead with a 224 total, even par for 54 holes.

But trouble on the greens befell Dale Shaw of Victoria, the leader after each of the first two days of play, and she struggled in with an 81.

She shared second spot at 228 with Louise Larochelle of Cap Rouge, Que., Susan Wickware of Toronto, and Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver, a two-time runner-up in the event.

Miss Larochelle had trouble on the front nine Friday, scoring 40 but scorched the back nine for four birdies to close with a 34, the best score on holes 10 through 18 for the tournament.

"I just hope my putter stays hot," the 21-year-old physiotherapist said later.

"I really got encouragement when I made par with a 15-footer on nine. The only problem before today was my putting and it was good today.

"I sure hope I can keep that up."

Miss Larochelle was on the green in required figures all but four times and went over par each time.

Miss Massey was elated over "my best back nine in many rounds" but was shaking her head over the front nine, "my worst for a long time."

She said she thought her putting game Friday "was like a bank."

"I had too many withdrawals on the front side and a few deposits on the back. I still ended up overdrawn one.

Miss Massey, a skiing enthusiast and instructor during winter months, had her troubles on the greens in two earlier rounds but still scored 74 Wednesday and 75 Thursday, three-putting seven times over the 36 holes.

"That doesn't make it easy but the four-shot lead is nice," she said.

The field was cut to the top 36 and ties after Friday's round, eliminating from further competition golfers whose three-round totals were 251 or more.

Among those starting today are Betty Cole of Edmonton, who had a 231 total after firing a 77 Friday.

On Howard, the Lions And Fishing's New Flak

One week's work, and isn't it great on a hot summer's day to have a balky car overheat, have to pull out of a ferry lineup, spend an hour at a border immigration point, get hung up in another ferry lineup and all on the same trip?

Oh well, the visit to Seattle's Kingdome (Thy Kingdome Come) was interesting indeed. And if there are only 2,700 on-site parking stalls, it's not a problem according to stadium director Ted Bowsfield.

What officials are planning is a community endeavour. And there will be up to 17,500 stalls (including those at the stadium) available for major events through the co-operation of businesses in the nearby area. Besides, there is free bus service in the downtown area — just step out of your hotel, grab a bus, and there you are; the train station is only 100 feet from one of the stadium entrances and the ferry terminals are less than eight minutes walk.

Regarding baseball, the major league situation is confused at best with four teams among the possibilities: Oakland, Chicago, San Francisco and Minnesota. But even that could change.

Tuesday, there was the second half of the Seattle show with Pete Rozelle and Howard Cosell the dignitaries who arrived late at the media conference and were hauled off early.

★ ★ ★

And in retrospect, Howard really is an articulate individual, who thinks the singular role of the media in the northwest is to hit out at professional baseball as the only major sport which is above government. In other words, baseball's reserve clause is inviolate but the courts have to rule on the Rozelle rule, which decides, among other things, what compensation is to be given for players who play out their option and sign with other clubs. It isn't fair. Tell the people how bad baseball is, says Howard. But come to think of it, trust Howard, he never did tell it to the Seattle folk what he thought might be wrong with football. He did it nicely though and after all this is the sixth year for Monday Night Football he reminded everyone.

Later that day, there was the exodus north to the den of the Lions of the CFL. And not many, only 18,000, about half capacity, showed up to greet Eagle Keys and his merry men in their yearly opener. And nobody but the Stampeders were merry this muggy night as they manhandled the Lions quite handily; and everyone was feeling sorry for the B.C. coach as the rout continued.

There had been a disturbing news story on the radio earlier that one or both (that meant Keys or GM Jackie Parker) would go if the Lions lost; and the claim was that four directors (who would meet the next day) had said so.

So the Lions lost, the directors met, Keys and Parker are still there, and the disruptive radio story and its editor are now under return fire from the directors. The quote was: "The board looks on Eagle Keys and his coaches to coach this season in its entirety and we want that on the record."

But what's happened? This wasn't supposed to be a bad Lions' team. It was in first place last year, remember? The club had an 8 and 4 record and was eyeing a bye in the playoffs. Disaster struck, however, and it may be significant that it struck with an injury to quarterback Don Moorhead. The Lions eventually lost their last four games, all narrowly, missed first place, and were quickly dispatched in the playoff. This season, despite the loss of several players, the Lions were respectable in pre-season play, appeared to have recruited well and with Moorhead healthy and throwing stronger and longer, there could be a chance to recoup some glory, even some fans.

But now they are zip and three and with Saskatchewan and Edmonton (twice) ahead on the schedule it looks like a long month of August. And good luck to the Eagle. If he's in his office at 6:30 every morning studying game films he should have his players there with him. Then they would know who's to blame.

Later still, back to the shop, and hey, a happy desker! No Lion talk from him; the Stadium, he'd go to the baseball; Cosell, no bother; but "did you hear about my fish?"

That was Thursday morning. Since then, it has been determined the fish was a salmon, 12 pounds, 11 ounces, 16 steaks were cut from the red spring, the party also caught a sole, red snapper, bass, from which fillets were taken; the fish fooled him by coming up alongside the boat; he was using nylon line; it was just outside the B.C. derby boundary at Hatch Point ("I'll show you on the map") and B.C. had claimed another convert. It was a first for Jim Crerar, and now he's looking at car tops.

But no, he's not entering the B.C. derby. He's leaving that to "Fast Ernie" (Fedoruk) and yours truly . . . "but if you're going by Hatch Point" . . . . Yes, Jim. Howard never could be that much fun.

Top-calibre competitions do not normally figure in Alice McConnell's lawn bowling plans.

"I just like to bowl in the small club events," said the 78-year-old member of the Victoria Lawn Bowling Club Thursday. "I'm getting too old for the real tough competition."

Maybe. But you would have trouble proving it by Flora Martin.

Mrs. Martin discovered Friday at the Victoria Club just how worthy an opponent Mrs. McConnell can be when she decides to enter that rare top-flight competition.

The two clashed for the "A" singles title in the Vancouver Island Women's Lawn Bowling Association tournament and when it was over Mrs. McConnell had dethroned the defending champion 15-10.

Fellow competitors who watched the match remarked afterward how superbly the new champion had played and it was indeed the truth.

To Mrs. McConnell, however, it was just another light afternoon of lawn bowling.

"I just came out here and enjoy myself," she said. "I don't take it all that seriously."

Enjoyable as the win was, it also gave her a taste of revenge over Mrs. Martin, who eliminated her in the semi-finals of last-year's tournament.

The triumph was not a new experience for Mrs. McConnell. She won in 1973 and "several other times."

Despite her perfect batting average in competition this year, she intends to maintain a low-key aproach to further major events.

"I'll bowl three or four times a week at the club but except for this event (Island tournament) I won't enter any big tournaments," said Mrs. McConnell, an amazingly spry woman who still swims regularly each week.

Mrs. Martin found some consolation for her defeat. She teamed with Jessie Kinneard, Sue Belton and Marion Barr to down Cec Sarles, Jean Fullard, Hazel Hall and Hazel James 18-10 in the rinks final.

The triples title went to Sue Belton, Marie Sage and Marg Atherton for their 21-7 victory over the North Vancouver trio of Maggie Kenmare, Debra and Muriel Holness.

Marjorie Speed and Joan Turner nipped Mrs. Atherton and Mrs. Barr 13-12 in an extra end to take the doubles while Doreen Green defeated Kitty Jones 15-5 in the "B"

Bruce Just Thought About Smooth Swing

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Australian veteran Bruce Crampton, winner of almost everything the game can offer except a major championship, tamed feared Firestone with a course-record 63 and swept into the second-round lead Friday in the 57th PGA National championship.

Crampton's round, bettered only twice in regular tour play this season, staked him to a three-shot lead halfway through this, the fourth and last of the season's major tests of golfing greatness.

"I would have to say the one thing missing from my career is a major title," said Crampton, grim-faced competitor on the course but a pleasant, smiling man away from his work. "After all, it's the only thing I haven't accomplished."

He has done the rest. He was the first foreign player ever to accumulate $1 million in career earnings. He was the first foreign player to win the coveted Vardon Trophy for the low stroke average on the tour. He has collected 15 American tour titles, including the Houston Open this year.

And his round was a record both for the vast, sprawling acres of Firestone 7180 yards of the toughest golf course the touring pros encounter, and for this old championship.

He also tied the PGA record for 36 holes. He passed the halfway mark in this tournament with a 134 total, six under par.

"I really didn't realize it was a course record, or a record of and kind," said Crampton. "I was just trying to keep my swing smooth."

Hale Irwin, who has the happy habit of playing the tougher courses at his very best, moved into position behind Crampton and the tournament took on a more familiar appearance.

Irwin, the 1974 U.S. Open champion bidding for a spot among the front rank of the game's greats, scored his first professional competitive hole-in-one on the way to a 65 and second place at 137.

Errors Aid Mikes In Deciding Game

Errors proved costly to Sooke Merchants Friday as they lost 1-0 to Mike's Sports in the final game of their best-of-three Island "C" men's softball final at Sooke Athletic Park.

Mike's scored the winning run in the bottom of the third extra inning when Jim Tilley led off with a single and then came home when the Sooke infield made errors on two ground balls.

Bob Harris allowed just three hits over the 10 innings to earn the victory while losing pitcher Ron Fedosenko gave up four safeties.

A Do-It-Yourself Triumph

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

It began three years ago when Bob Saunders started looking for a place where his youngsters could play lacrosse. It ended with a major sports facility at Centennial Park in Langford and the resurrection of the area's recreation association.

In the process, Saunders and his neighbors discovered how much you can save by doing it yourself. In their case, it amounts to approximately $70,000 worth of facilities for $12,000.

The secret lies in getting the materials at little or not cost and involving businesses, schools, service clubs and individuals with donations of cash and free labor.

Langford isn't the only area to use this formula to improve recreational facilities, but few neighborhoods have done it on a larger scale.

Saunders is the father of two boys and three girls, all of whom play lacrose, When he couldn't find a lacrosse box in his neighborhood, he went to Laurie Harrison, now president of the revived Langford Recreation Association, with the idea of building one.

Harrison felt the recreation group could handle the job, but a letter had gone to the regional board suggesting the association pack it in. Harrison and Saunders revived it and set out to build the lacrosse box.

The site was a 7.8-acre class "C" provincial park at Carlow and Goldstream Avenue, but a lot of work was needed.

Saunders, his wife, Norma, Harrison, Marvin Copp, Art Muralt and Jim McNulty formed the original group to improve the facilities. Muralt surveyed the field and Copp wore out a bulldozer he owned levelling the area.

Money and materials were needed and that's where Eric Butler of Butler Brothers in Sooke came into the picture. He extended credit for $5,000 worth of building materials.

Next came a bank loan for $7,500.

The group paid off Butler and the bank last year when a $7,000 grant came through from the provincial government's $10 million recreation fund. A kayak raffle and assorted other fund-rasing projects helped retire the debt.

Adults and youngsters served on a volunteer labor gang that Harrison estimates logged 160 hours a week for about a year on the lacrosse box, bleachers, concession stand, dressing rooms and washroom facilities.

Area service clubs have also played a vital role in maintaining and adding facilities in the park. The Lions put up a tennis shelter and are installing playground equipment; the Kinsmen look after a community hall on the property; the Kiwanis built lacrosse bleachers and the Optimists and Canadian Legion have donated cash.

"Without the volunteer labor and cash donations from these service clubs, we wouldn't be where we are now," Harrison admitted.

Anotehr individual who has made a large contribution in time and energy is Curtis McCulloch, who has taken a leading part in developing tennis facilities and washrooms.

Work is under way on a second tennis court and three softball diamonds with nearly 35,000 yards of fill going into their construction.

Future plans call for the installation of lights at the lacrosse box and, possibly, the construction of a lawn bowling green and other facilities for senior citizens.

Hundreds of area residents use the park, including Saunders' five youngsters.

Last weekend was especially gratifying when Saunders 11-year-old daughter Ruth a bantam lacrosse player who got her start in the new Langford box, became the first girl selected to the B.C. Lacrosse Association minor playoff tournament all-star team in New Westminster. A centre with 100F bantam girls in Langford, Ruth was picked up along with team-mate Shelley Huget to play for Esquimalt Bantam girls, who finished second in their division of the playoffs.

One of the biggest dividends of all, however, came from having the youngsters build and maintain the new facilities.

"We had a lot more damage done in the park before the improvements were made than we do now," Saunders noted. "The kids do a lot of their own policing."

Eagle Delays Action

VANCOUVER (CP) — As if British Columbia Lions haven't enough problems, they've got to go into Regina Sunday and take on Saskatchewan Roughriders, the leading team in the Western Football Conference.

Lions are winless in three starts this season and riddled with injuries to key personnel. Roughriders have won the three games they've played.

Lions' coach Eagle Keys counted on taking as much time as possible before deciding his lineup for Sunday's contest. Those injuries aren't making his decision easy.

Quarterback Don Moorhead has a muscle injury in his left shoulder, middle linebacker Ray Nettles has a bruised hip, defensive back Rocky Long has a bruised thigh, receivers Ross Clarkson and Slade Willis have shoulder injuries and defensive back Joe Fourqurean has a bruised knee.

Keys said linebacker Dan McDonough and defensive tackle Don Wunderly are ready to come off the 21-day injured lsit. Both were forced to the sidelines by ankle injuries.

However, to get them into the lineup, Keys will have to cut someone or place somebody on the injured list. That's another decision he was in no hurry to make, preferring to wait until Lions practiced this morning prior to the flight to Regina.

"They (Stampeders) beat us physically," Keys said. "I didn't think they could do that, but they did."

One thing Keys doesn't want to have happen is 'Riders getting into an early lead. Calgary scored 10 points Tuesay before the Lions' offence got onto the field and couldn't get the points back.

"Football's a game of momentum," Keys said. "When you get out in front like that you just seem to hit harder and do a lot more things right."

Arizona Pro Out in Front

REGINA (CP) — A 51-year-old Arizonian competing in his first professional golf tournament this year emerged as the first round leader in the Saskatchewan Open Friday with a five under par 66.

Dick Turner, a club pro in Mesa, stayed even par on the front nine and scored a five-under 32 on the back nine despite increasingly gusty winds.

"We call Texas our home and it blows pretty good there," he said later.

Turner, who played on the U.S. professional tour in 1956, 1957, and 164, said his last victory was in the Arizona Open, "about 1971, I guess."

One stroke behind him after Friday's play were Jason Paukkunen of Vancouver and John Elliott of Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

Pickell Wins Final After Record Falls

Times News Service

An Australian hotshot Friday set a Canadian Open swimming record by swimming faster in a consolation race than natinal champion Stephen Pickell of Vancouver did in winning the main event.

Stephen Badger, an Australian national team member, was clocked in the 800-metre freestyle in 1:56.41. Pickell finished in 1:56.56.

SPORT SHORTS

Badger's time was better than Pickell's Canadian native record of 1:56.48. The Australian has a personal best of 1:55.4.

Nancy Garapick of Halifax and Cheryl Gibson of Edmonton also turned in impressive performances. Miss Garapick took the 100-metre backstroke in 1:05.10 while Miss Gibson captured the 200-metre butterfly in 2:17.58.

About 30 athletes will be selected Monday for the Canadian team to compete in the Pan-American Games trials in Mexico City in October.

Elsewhere in sport:

Jim Boyce of Toronto defeated second-seed Dale Power of Toronto 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 and Tony Bardsley of Vancouver beat top-seed Rejean Genois of Loretteville, Que., 6-4, 7-5 in men's singles semi-finals at the Canadian national tennis championships in Winnipeg . . . The boys' and girls' doubles in the B.C. junior claycourt championships in Vancouver have been cancelled and the tournament, disrupted by rain, may be extended to Sunday instead of finishing today as scheduled . . .

Jimmy Connors, Ken Rosewall, Ilie Nastase and defending-champion Rod Laver advanced to the semi-finals of the $100,000 International tournament in North Conway, N.H.

Darrell Pace of Reading, Ohio, won the men's division while Irene Lorenson of Phoenix, Ariz., took the women's title in the 91st annual National Archery Association target tournament in Oxford, Ohio . . . Nick Mike-Mayer kicked a 19-yard field goal with 15 seconds left to give Atlanta Falcons a 16-14 win over Washington Redskins in National Football League exhibition play in Washington . . . Canada beat Yugoslavia 51-48 in an invitational women's basketball tournament in Jambol, Bulgaria . . . Earlier in the week, the Canadians lost 62-58 to another team from Yugoslavia . . .

Miami Toros edged the visiting Baltimore Comets 2-1 and the Dynamos shut out St. Louis Stars 3-0 in Denver in North American Soccer League play . . . Bill Buchan of Seattle clinched the world sailing championship for Olympic class sailings on Lake Michigan.

Cedar Hill Takes Golf League Title

Cedar Hill fairway veterans nailed down first place in the Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf League Friday by defeating Glen Meadows 5½ to ½ in a match played at Glen Meadows.

The margin of victory kept Cedar Hill 1½ points ahead of runner-up Gorge Vale and gave the Saanich club possession of the Feathery Ball Trophy.

Gorge easily retained second place in the final matches of the schedule by taking five and one-half of the six available points against Colwood on the Gorge course.

In the other contest, Victoria Golf Club scored a 3½-to-2½ victory over Uplands, which wound up in the third position.

FINAL STANDINGS

With His Pirate Problems, Why Fret Over Phillies?

By The Associated Press

Manager Danny Murtaugh isn't concerned with second-place Philadelphia Phillies. He's got enough to worry about these days the way his Pittsburgh Pirates are playing.

"I'm not worried about Philadelphia; I only worry about my own club," he said Friday after the Pirates dropped a 5-3 decision to Houston Astros.

Coupled with Philadelphia's 5-4 win over San Francisco Giants, the loss sliced the Pirates' lead over the Phillies in baseball's National League's East Division to three games.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles Dodgers edged New York Mets 4-3, St. Louis Cardinals outlasted San Diego Padres 10-6, Montreal Expos nipped Cincinnati Reds 8-7 and Chicago Cubs downed Atlanta Braves 3-1 after dropping the doubleheader opener 1-0.

The Pirates' defeat was their third in a row and ninth in 13 games. In eight of those contests, the hard-hitting Pirates have been held to three runs or less.

Right-hander Dock Ellis, staked to a quick 3-0 lead on Dave Parker's homer, lasted only two-thirds of an inning and allowed four hits, including runscoring singles by Cliff Johnson and Milt May. The Astros tied it in the second and won it with two runs off reliever Kent Tekulve in the third.

Meanwhile, Houston reliever Jim Crawford replaced Doug Konieczny with two out in the first inning and blanked the Pirates the rest of the way on four hits.

Dick Allen singled home the winning run for Philadelphia in the ninth inning after Garry Maddox beat out a one-out infield single, stole second and went to third on reliever Randy Moffitt's wild pickoff throw. Greg Luzinski walked before Allen's winning hit.

The Giants tied the game 4-4 on Willie Montanez' three-run homer in the eighth off Tom Underwood. Luzinski drove in two runs with his 28th homer and a sacrifice fly.

St. Louis took a 4-0 lead against San Diego on six successive singles to start the first inning against Dan Spillner, and winning pitcher Bob Forsch hit his first major-league homer, a two-run shot in the third. He also singled and scored in the second.

Mike Jorgensen singled home two runs in the ninth inning to tie the game, took second on the throw to home and scored on Larry Parrish's single to end Cincinnati's five-game winning streak.

CABLES CLIPPED

NEW WESTMINSTER — New Westminster Salmonbellies edged Burnaby Cablevision 17-15 in Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League action Friday.

The loss was only the fourth of the season but second in a row for the leading Burnaby club. Sunday, the team dropped a 17-10 decision to Victoria McDonalds.

Ivan Tuura topped the Salmonbellies with four goals. Randy Delmonico and Derek Dickson each scored three times for the losers.

Quebecois Gain On Tomahawks

MONTREAL (CP) — Ross Jones scored three goals to pace Montreal Quebecois to a 10-7 win over Maryland Arrows in the only National Lacrosse League game Friday night.

The win moved the Quebecois, with a 22-19 won-lost record, within four points of first-place Long Island Tomahawks.

Limping Sandra Steps Into Lead

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — Sandra Palmer of the United States, playing with a badly-blistered right foot, moved into a two-stroke lead after the third round of the European Women's Open golf championship Friday with a 72—211 on the sun-scorched Sunningdale course.

Miss Palmer had shared the lead with Donna Caponi Young after 36 holes, but Mrs. Young slipped to a 74—213 and a share of second place with Susie McAllister, a Texan who charged into contention despite a wasp sting on the eighth tee. Miss McAllister, who won her first professional golf tournament only five weeks ago, fired a five-under-par 69, best round of the day, with the help of tight birdies.

Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., shot a 72 Friday for a three-round total of 222. Sandra Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont., and now living in Florida, had a 74 and has 223 after three rounds. Both made the three-round cut for today's final round.

Ontario Wins

CALGARY (CP) — Ontario won the Canadian interprovincial cricket championships Friday by defeating Alberta by 146 runs.

Alberta's loss placed them third behind Quebec, which claimed the runner-up spot by defeating Saskatchewan by nine wickets.

Nova Scotia pulled off the shock win of the day by dismissing the last three British Columbia batsmen with the B.C. squad, needing only three runs to win.

Replying to Nova Scotia's total of 159, B.C. took their inning to 157 for seven but lost the final three wickets for the addition of only one run.

B.C.'s Chris Vantwest scored 56 runs and Tim Lord of Cowichan was 25 not out.

Wings Hopeful Of U.S. Tour

ROLLING STONE

LONDON — It was a brilliantly sunny day in London, and Paul McCartney, fresh from an outing in St. James Park with wife Linda, was in a carefree mood. Pre-released orders for his new album, Venus and Mars — to be issued the following week — had topped 1.5 million. He had finally assembled a Wings group he liked. And he was bubbling over with ideas for future projects — including an autumn tour of the U.S.

"We'd like to have the band out in Britain this summer, and then really get it together for autumn to go someplace like America," he said, sitting back in one of the Soho offices of McCartney Productions. "I keep saying we're coming to America. We're planning to do it — we really want to."

McCartney is so confident in his new group — which includes Denny Laine on bass, Jimmy McCulloch on guitar and Joe English on drums, in addition to Paul on bass and piano and Linda on supporting vocals — that he has dropped himself from top billing for the first time in two years. The group recorded Venus and Mars in band-on-the-run fashion at studios in New Orleans and Los Angeles, after McCartney had written most of the tunes in Jamaica.

"We have to record outside the country," McCartney said, frowning at the thought of the British tax laws. "I have to write all my songs outside the country, too. Otherwise the government will say, 'Right, this is a British record, all the money has to come back to Britain. I'm in 98 per cent tax then. I don't particularly like it when the government gets 30 per cent, but it's better than me getting two pence to the pound."

Wings had been recording off and on since last fall, when they did "Junior's Farm," their last single, in Nashville. Although "Junior's Farm" extended Wings' string of consecutive Top Ten singles to seven, it isn't included on the album. "It didn't fit with the stuff we had, so it became a single," Paul said. "If we really had been thinking single, we probably would have done a lot more with it."

Venus and Mars is a collection of accessible yet intricate songs, reflecting musical styles from '20s-flavored tunes to R& arrangements. McCartney denied that the planets represent Linda and himself. "At our L.A. party for the album, somebody came up to us and said, 'Hello, Venus. Hello, Mars.' And I thought, 'Oh my God!' It never even occurred to me. I wrote a totally imaginary song. I thought, Jupiter ... no that doesn't fit. Saturn ... no. Venus and Mars ... that's great, I'll just put it in. Later I found out that Venus and Mars have lined themselves up for the first time in something like a thousand years."

Astrology isn't the only otherworldly influence in Venus and Mars. The album also contains "Spirits of Ancient Egypt," a song Paul wrote after reading a book on the pyramids that Chet Atkins had given him. "Magneto and Titanium Man," meanwhile, concerns Marvel Comic characters. "I'd thought I'd grown out of comics but I came back to them a couple of years ago," Paul explained. "I've been reading a bit of science fiction, things like 'Foundation' by Asimov. I love the scope of it, the vision, because you can write anything.

ADDING TO LOVE SONG

The first single off the album "Listen to What the Man Said," a love song of sorts, had tracks added to it in Los Angeles after the original session in New Orleans.

"There's a funny story about that one," Paul said, grinning again. "It was one of the songs that we had high hopes for. But when we did the backing track, we thought we really didn't get it together at all. We let it stay, then Dave Mason came in and added some guitar. But we still needed a solo. So we thought it would be great to have a very technical musician come in and do a great musical solo. Someone said that Tom Scott lives very near. So we said, 'Give him a ring' — and he turned up in half an hour! He sat down in the studio and started playing casually. Meanwhile the engineer was recording it. No one could believe it. He had all the feel on this first take."

Besides preparing for his tour, McCartney will follow the album's release by preparing two film projects in the coming months. One of them involves an earlier line-up of Wings, which included Henry McCollough on guitar and Denny Sewell on drums. "We were rehearsing in Nashville and we just went into a studio and filmed the numbers," Paul explained. "That's being put together now with the name One Hand Clapping." The other film is an as-yet-unnamed show geared for children.

But McCartney has more than films on his mind. He and Linda have "millions" of potential radio spots in their home studio. "I got a lot of little things together for a radio show I'd like to do on the BBC," he said. "In England you haven't got an awful lot of good radio programs ... you figure that today they could give up some of their gardening tips for Led Zeppelin. I'd like to play a lot of good music and have some good guests."

These are good times for McCartney, even though Apple Ltd,, the old Beatles company, was liquidated recently.

"There's no sense in having the shell of Saville Row if nothing's going to be in it," McCartney sighed. "It's over, so we might as well close Apple." Venus and Mars and future Wings releases are to bear the Capitol logo. The terms of McCartney's Capitol contract have not been released, but one source said they were "commensurate with Capital and EMI's respect for Paul's status as a world superstar."

Venus and Mars was released at the same time as Elton John's and the Rolling Stones' new albums. "In the old days we'd go around to each other and we'd always work out album release dates," McCartney explained.

"But I don't see any point in doing that now ... Music is coming back. It went through a bad stretch, but I think there's a lot happening now, especially in black music and reggae. Things are getting pretty good."

BOOST FOR RECORDS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Council has approved a new program to encourage Canadian-owned record companies to promote more new Canadian serious music recordings, a council official said this week.

The council has earmarked $50,000-described as "a modest amount, to start" — which is to be used to help pay recording and stidio costs.

Recordings to be subsidized will be judged by a Canada Council jury, and an important consideration will be the distribution and publicity the recording companies intend to give.

Curious Film Probes Worker's Obsessions

A Film Review
By NORA HUTCHISON

Elio Petri's Lulu The Tool, the Counting House Cinema's final offering in its Film Festival series, is a curious and intriguing film — a political fable about the consciousness-raising of an Italian factory worker.

Lulu Massa (Gian Maria Volonte) is a pieceworker in a plant that manufactures motors for an unseen machine. His single amusement each day is to be the worker with the highest output. Lulu's ambition irritates his co-workers, opens him up to exploitation by his bosses, and leaves him no time or energy to think about much tlse.

Lulu lives for the factory. He has absorbed his bosses' work ethic and their dreams for increased efficiency and productivity. The factory has conditioned him to thinking in terms of "piecemeal" and "interchangeable parts". At work he thinks about a girl to help him keep the right rhythm as he operates his machine; at home, in bed, he thinks about machines. He's even exchanged his wife and child for a mistress and her boy.

But Lulu isn't a complete automaton yet. When he loses a finger at his machine while trying to further increase his "output", he's forced to slow down. Lulu uses the time to take stock, think things over, visit friends. One old friend, Militina, is locked away in a mental hospital. Lulu goes to see him because he thinks he's going mad too, and wants to make sure it isn't so. But Militina is there for the very reasons that haunt Lulu. Militina was angry enough to collar his boss once and yell "Tell me what these pieces are used ofr, or so help me, I'll kill you!"

Returning to work, Lulu takes the side of the leftist leaders in a factory strike but discovers that the Maoists are only interested in him "at a class level". So for Lulu, finally, the assembly line camaraderie is his only comfort. He forsakes management goals, sings on the job, and describes a prophetic dream in which the workers smash down a wall and climb through to Heaven. The other men laugh, and clamour — "Were we there?" "Was I there too?" Lulu nods. "We were all there. But what does it matter," he adds, "it was only a dream." Whatever he wanted to know, he's decided is best forgotten.

★ ★ ★

Petri's direction is inventive and vigorous. He and Volonte, who also starred in the director's earleir "Investigation of a Citizen Above Suspicion" handle the character of Lulu with sensitivity and humor. Lulu is both anarchist and bourgeois, hard-line revolutionary and middle-of-the-road unionist. He is enraged and at the same time amused by his mindless job, and the film's tightly organized structure reflects his dismay with a programmed existence he apparently can't control. But when he finally decides to be his own man, output or no, the film takes off and with it, Lulu Massa, a tough, boastful, absurdly comic being whose suddenly freed spirits are almost too much to handle.

Controversial Play Here

For the first time Victoria theatre audiences will have an opportunity to see George Ryga's headline-making play, Captives of the Faceless Drummer. It will be presented at Open Space, 510 Fort, Thursday and Friday at 8:15 p.m.

This is the play by the author of The Ecstacy of Rita Joe, that was the centre of a much publicize dcontroversy between Ryga and the Vancouver Playhouse in 1971 when its scheduled production was suddenly cancelled.

Captives of the Faceless Renaissance Players, a new Drummer is two opposing world views in constant conversation, one espoused by Harry (David Ross) the other by the Commander (Russell Lybarger).

It explores change — the kinds of change brought about by the Cross-LaPorte kidnappings and the War Measures Act; the altered state of love in our society; the searching for new life forms.

Ryga's statement that "we must change or we will get lost in the wasteland", comes across clearly. Many critics have considered Captives to be one of Canada's most crucial plays.

Tickets will be available at the door or may be obtained in advance. For further information call 383-8833.

Bill Opposes Arab Boycott

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Hugh Carey has signed into law a bill intended to work against the Arab economic boycott of Jewish business interests.

The bill makes it unlawful to discriminate against, boycott, blacklist or refuse to engage in commercial dealings with a person because of race, color, creed, national origin or sex of the person or business associates.

MELODIES FOR AUGUST

Melodies for August, a concert of new music produced by Owen Underhill and Christopher Butterfield, is a midweek attraction coming up at Open Space.

The concert, scheduled at 8 p.m., Wednesday, will present the music of avant-gardist Edgard Varese, Christian Wolff, Morton Feldman, Josef Mathias Hauer (founder of the 12-tone system), Eric Satie and many others.

Underhill and Butterfield have been active in the presentation of new music concerts in both Victoria and Vancouver through the University of Victoria music department and the Composers' Group which recently returned from a highly successful tour of Europe.

Players in the concert will include Mary Des Roches who will be inaugurating the first Suzuki piano class in Victoria at the Conservatory of Music this fall; Steven Seeds, trombonist from UVic; Underhill on flute and piano; Margaret Hubner, piano; Rollyn Morris, violin and Butterfield, singer and pianist.

Internationally noted composer from UVic, Rudolf Komorous will be playing one of his own compositions for piano.

On Tuesday at 8 p.m. at 510 Fort, the second of a series of "coffee house" entertainments will feature Gary and Glenna Colyer.

Recent arrivals in Victoria, the Colyers have been playing on the island at pleasure fairs. Gary has played professionally in the United States, performing in lounges throughout the Northwest.

Glenna has been playing at coffee houses and dinner restaurants in the U.S. and Canada for the past year.

At Open Space the Colyers will be performing singly and together, doing original material and their own and other arrangements of songs.

Abortion Sought

Space Squeeze Toll Rises

audrey johnson

More this week concerning the space-ache afflicting this city as information and comments flow in following last Saturday's column.

But before discussing it further let us capsulize the problem that lies at the root of our year-by-yearly increasing distress.

It's not money. Not when it comes to the crunch.

Money, you must have observed, can always be found by the politicians if its objective has enough vote-purchasing power. Ignorance is the problem. An engulfing ignorance of the major role the arts play in modern life.

Amateurism in the arts—that is the prsuit of art forms on a wide democratic scale—has intensified, not dwindled, in response to the rapid growth of artistic professionalism in Canada.

It has been estimated, as the result of country-wide surveys, not only that more people participate in arts activities, but that many more people attend performing arts events in the course of a year than do sporting events.

A study of the diffusion of the performing and exhibiting arts in Canada undertaken by York University's Programme in Arts Administration in 1973, comments that "In the last few years attitudes towards the arts have been changing everywhere . . . art is neither a commodity nor a practice which can be separated from the flux of life as a whole."

* * *

Ignorance of these contemporary discoveries of an ancient and basic truth is what creates situations like the current dilemma in Victoria.

Last week I discussed the murky future of Open Space at 510 Fort; the unsatisfactory Royal Theatre situation; the severe limitations of the Newcombe Auditorium.

What was scarcely touched on was the eviction threat hanging over Bastion Theatre and the Maritime Museum now that the city has decided to unload the old courthouse building on Bastion Square, and the extreme problems of Victoria Conservatory of Music bursting at the seams at Craigdarroch Castle.

Now further to all this must be added that Bastion has lost its children's theatre at 538 Yates Street, which the owner is converting to other purposes. To date a substitute location has not been found.

And Maurice Harty, director of the promising theatre program for Camosun College, is desperate for rehearsal space and a stage for the performances which are part of his program.

* * *

Past president of Victoria Operatic Society Peter Chipman says that the VOS problems are similar to Bastion's in that they produce at the McPherson but are in a more or less constant quandary with regard to space for rehearising, working and storage.

At the present time they are happy to be able to sublet part of a warehouse for scene building and storage, but one of the two halls they were using at Cadboro Bay for rehearsal (St. Geroge's Church halls) won't be available this coming season.

Victoria Theatre Guild has been most fortunate for many years in having its own theatre at Langham Court with all self-contained facilities. But it too is on a razor's edge, being situated where city zoning and fire regulations could close its doors at any time.

These are the existing circumstances. They could scarcely be worse considering the size of the city, its steady population growth, the high level of activity in the arts and the fact that it is the capital of the province.

Is anything at all in the offing? Yes, but neither close enough nor of a general enough nature to greatly alleviate the space-ache.

When the new wing of the Victoria Art Gallery is built it may possibly incorporate a small film and chamber music recital hall, according to the hope of director Roger Boulet.

Advanced plans for UVic's music building include a properly designed and sizeable concert hall, but of course UVic activities will take priority in its use.

What other measures—if any—can be taken?

It seems to me that we would be wise to assume that the city is going to do nothing but initiate more, and totally unnecessary studies. We've got filing drawers full of studies. Every possible particle of pertinent information is on record. "Studies" can only be construed as a delaying tactic.

One thing is virtually certain: If the city, Chamber of Commerce and business associations do between them evolve the years-long debated convention centre, that's all it will be.

* * *

As far as the performing arts are concerned it is unlikely to have any validity whatsoever—or at best it would be another unsatisfactory makeshift.

It had occurred to me as it must have done to others, that the organizations so hardly pressed have one avenue to explore. They could seek a way of combining whatever resources might be available, mount a joint campaign for funds, and get the job done on their own.

Under those circumstances they would have a very reasonable prospect of receiving financial assistance from the provincial government and might even expect some land assistance from the Capital Region District.

This sort of self-help is not unheard of. It's been done with high success in other parts of Canada.

Chipman tells me that VOS is seriously contemplating a plan for erecting its own building, a project that reflects great credit on their past successes, business acumen and present initiative.

Nevertheless it concerns me that our arts organizations should be pressed into finding solutions on an individual basis when what is so badly needed at this time is a concerted attack on the overall problem.

* * *

One recognizes the difficulties inherent in attempting such a co-operative but without it there seems to me little hope of achieving a major resolution.

So what remains now is to discover whether we are big enough in mind, bold enough and of sufficient strength of purpose to attempt to do for ourselves what it is obvious no one is going to do on our behalf.

Folk Ballet Coming

For 28 years the opening dance of the Ballet Beriozka has been the same, a sort of signature for the troupe that had its origin among the village dancers of Russias Kalinin Region.

Girls in long red skirts holding birch branches in homage to romantic birch forests, perform the round dance, title of which means "little birch'.

More than 100 dancers, singers and musicians of the Beriozka company will give a single performance Aug. 24 at Victoria's Memorial Arena. Jointly sponsored by the city and John Minshall, Beriozka promises spectacular summer evening entertainment for the entire family.

The 16 dances that make up the program represent everything from festive Siberian evenings to hunter's gatherings and the chattering of village gossips.

Originally an all-girl troupe, a few years ago male dancers were added. Now the program alternates the flowing maidens' dances with the snap and vibrancy of the men's performances.

The company comprises 50 women and 40 male dancers, many of them trained in the famed Bolshoi Ballet School, together with an orchestra of 20 musicians playing traditional Russian instruments. More than 2,000 costumes are used per tour, many of them entirely hand embroidered.

Dutch back model towns

By LEAVITT MORRIS

MIDDELBURG, The Netherlands (CSM) — Here, every Thursday on Market Day, is where you meet the Dutch in person.

People stream into the square opposite the Town Hall from neighboring villages to shop and to chat. Many of the women came in their native dress of linen bonnets and flowing skirts. And you'll probably hear the clop of wooden shoes against the cobblestones.

This charming village is a pleasant, all-day drive from Amsterdam on excellent and clearly marked roads.

There are busy tours from Amsterdam, but to make the trip leisurely and to see and photograph many of the tourist attractions en route, a rental car adds flexibility to what would be at least a two-day sojourn.

From Amsterdam you start out on Route 1 to Leiden and E-10 to Delft. There you might want to visit the factory where Delft pottery is made. For years Delftware has been one of the most sought-after souvenirs of the Netherlands.

Along the route lie rich farmlands, grazed by plump sheep and cattle. At intervals, posing with arms at rest for that inevitable photograph, are windmills, each one a historic monument. In the 17th century there were thousands of these mills. They were used to grind grain and pump water from the land to keep it fertile for planting. Pumping is done by motors now, thus making the mill obsolete. There are approximately 1,000 left; thousands of guilders have been spent by the government in restoring many of them.

As you drive along, it appears that the Dutch people don't mind living in a goldfish bowl. Most of their homes have large picture windows which succeed in bringing the out-of-doors indoors. Each window is attractively decorated with lacy curtains swept back to display an array of flowers.

Each Netherlands windmill is historic monument

In Middelburg, there are about 1,100 buildings, large and small, which are regarded as monuments. Middelburg, along with Amsterdam and Orvelte in the province of Denthe, has been designated by the government as a "pilot town" or as we would call them, "model towns."

The village's outstanding building is the reconstructed Gothic Town Hall on the Market. The original building was destroyed in the Second World War.

All monuments in the Netherlands, with the exception of government buildings, are the property of private individuals or organizations. But each owner is subject to restrictive provisions set up by the Monument Council. The owner has the right to sell his property, but he may not make any renovations or changes without approval of the council.

From Middelburg it is a short drive to the beach resort and seaport of Vlissingen (translated into English, Flushing). A restful night can be spent here at the 35-room modern Grand Britannia Hotel, overlooking the promenade and the sea where ships ride at anchor waiting for clearance to sail into Antwerp.

Before the war, Vlissingen was a popular resort for the British who arrived there from Sheerness in southeast England by a seven-hour ferry ride. The original Britannia Hotel was destroyed in 1944 by the British Air Force.

Return trip to Amsterdam can easily be made in a day, even if you stop at Rotterdam, the Netherland's busiest port. Each town and village passed through en route has cosy restaurants.

Another worthwhile side trip from Amsterdam is the village of Orvelte, the Netherlands' third "pilot town." It is being restored in its entirety according to the oldest known cadastral map—one from 1830. This showed 17 farmhouses with outbuildings. Eight of these still remain. The farmer and his family and hired hands had their living quarters in the barn along with the cattle—heat from the animals was all that kept the place warm in the winter.

The agricultural atmosphere of Orvelte has been so well maintained that when you walk along its narrow lanes there is a rich, earthy smell of stable and cattle. Sheep graze on flourishing plots of ground, and buckwheat, the major crop in the 1880's, is still grown.

This year a number of old crafts are being practiced again, and the village will acquire a restaurant serving Drenthe specialties.

Access to the village is by foot. Motor cars of visitors are not allowed to enter.

Czech spas: They gush and gush

By JOHN PHILIP SOUSA

KARLOVY VARY, Czechoslovakia (CNS) — Tradition has it that it all started when Charles got hurt during a stag hunt.

It happened during the 14th century when King Charles IV was sovereign of Bohemia as well as Holy Roman emperor.

Seeking to relieve the pain of his wound, the tale goes, he spotted clear waters flowing from an underground spring. A little bit of the stuff and, presto, the royal body was healed. Word about the monarch's near-miraculous cure spread fast and far.

In short order, the land of the springs — in a wooded valley by the narrow Tepla River at the foot of the Ore mountains — became the site of the town now known as Karlovy Vary.

Today, about 600 years later, it retains its fame as the premier spa among the more than 50 developed around Czechoslovakia's more than 900 natural mineral springs.

Karlovy Vary is one in a triangle of such resorts in this country's western corner and it is known primarily for the treatment of stomach ailments. The other two are Marianske Lazne, for brain, urological and respiratory diseases, and Frantiskovy Lazne, whose two dozen springs reportedly do wonders for those with heart problems and other cardiovascular disorders.

Carlsbad, Marienbad and Franzenbad.

It'd be a mistake to think that the "springs of life" gushing up in these delightful Czech towns attract only the geriatric and wheel chair sets.

The three resorts — especially Karlovy Vary — draw thousands of mostly young visitors from all over the world. More often than not their sole ailment is a case of city-induced "workitis" and their purpose here is a taste, at a rather reasonable cost, of the good life, Czech style.

Karlovy Vary, for instance, annually hosts a famous international film festival. Cultural life is busy and the fare varied.

There are several good hotels, restaurants, nightclubs and lively cafes, mostly on the colorful banks of the stream-like Tepla which winds its way through the heart of town. You will also find here one of Europe's finest golf courses, good hiking and riding trails, fishing, boating and swimming.

This is also the home of Moser Glassworks, makers of superb crystal and china. Working in relatively small quarters, its artisans have filled special orders for royalty and governments around the world. In the exhibit hall are samples of the handsome china set commissioned by the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Marianske Lazne (the Marienbad of movie fame) boasts 40 springs that pour out of the ground all over town.

Entertainment, accommodations and other facilities are plentiful and reasonable. A magnificent forest surrounds the town.

The setting alone — tree-crowded hills, beautiful parks and manicured gardens — is worth a visit to Frantiskovy Lazne. In addition to the treatment of cardiovascular infirmities, this spa's springs are used for the cure of gynecologic disturbances.

The three resorts share a rich architectural heritage, something you actually can spot in most Czech towns regardless of size. Baroque, Neo-Gothic and Renaissance buildings — invariably kept in excellent repair — are everywhere.

Thus you see in Karlovy Vary, for example, gleaming modern structures reflecting their slender and tall silhouettes on the Tepla River alongside those of the stately older houses and hotels.

A popular pastime here is to stroll along Karlovy Vary's famous marble Colonnade, in and around which there are several springs with taps. Nearby shops sell small cups, but the waters are free.

Vera, the gracious interpreter assigned to us by the Czechoslovak Travel Office (CEDOK), gave us a tip worth repeating: Go easy with your drinking, lest the laxative properties of the springs do their thing.

Less than three hours by express train, bus or car from Prague — Czechoslovakia's beautiful capital — Karlovy Vary, Marianske Lazne and Frantiskovy Lazne are but three of West Bohemia's many attractions.

Restaurant in Madrid celebrates 250 years

By STAN DELAPLANE

MADRID, Spain — "Botin's — where Hemingway set the last scene in The Sun Also Rises — is celebrating its 250th year of serving roast suckling pig and lamb. Thus topping the U.S. bicentennial by 50 years." A friend sends me the anniversary menu.

Botin's is at the bottom of the ancient Plaza Mayor. Buildings lean over a lantern-lit street and the night carries a whiff of wine and garlic.

When August grew too hot, I drove north to where the grey cordillera rises above the Bay of Biscay — the Mare Cantabricus on Roman maps. It's cool country. The ancient kingdom of Asturias that never fell to the Moors.

The road following the sea was known as the French road. Along it for 600 years marched the European pilgrims, singing hymns and praying for the destruction of the infidel Moors.

The goal was the holy tomb of St. James at Compostela. It was discovered in year 811 by angelic directions. Pilgrims were entitled forever to wear the scallop shell insignia.

It gave a surge to Christianity that sent Spanish armies south until the last Moorish king handed over the keys of the Alhambra to Ferdinand and Isabella.

★ ★ ★

". . . when will we find good weather in Spain?"

You have to follow the weather. In summer it's hot as a sheriff's pistol in Madrid. In winter, as chill as a pawnbroker's eye. The Atlantic coast is just right — 75 degrees daytime — in midsummer. But the south is unbearably hot. There are towns in La Mancha that move into hillside caves in the summer.

Best all round weather is October, north or south. It's grand in Madrid. The sun puts a mist of gold in the air.

In mid winter, it's freezing cold. The only warm place in Spain then is on the southern Costa del Sol around Malaga.

"I paint and my husband writes. We have money enough for two months abroad . . ."

You can still do well in Spain and Portugal if you stay out of the major cities. For a sunny and cool summer, there's the town of Vigo, Spain. It's just north of the Portuguese border. Not too big, not too small.

The deep bay sparkles with instant silver pieces-of-eight. The water is the color of washed blue jeans. Square little framework mussel boats are fixed on the surface. And the grey stone villages are warmed by drying mahogany-colored sardine nets.

There's a fort on the hill and traces of the old medieval town. In 1702 an English fleet attacked a Spanish convoy here, loaded with plunder from Aztec temples and Inca palaces.

They sank the ships, spiked the fort cannon and sailed off with one ship loaded with treasure. Before they cleared the harbor, the treasure ship hit a rock and sank. It's there today — under 20 feet of mud.

★ ★ ★

"Without too much money — and we wear beards and beads—what's the best place to sit down on?"

Kauai — 20 minutes from Honolulu—is home to the shaggy set. Used to be Maui. But the hassle got too frantic. No hitchhiking, for example, is a law on Maui. Molokai—practically nobody goes there — is the gay retreat. Three modest hotels. An untouched island, once the leper colony of Hawaii.

AN ANCIENT ROAD LIVES

LONDON (UPI) — Some 250,000 years ago a woman, known to science as Swanscombe Woman, left her skull in the gravel of the Thames Estuary not far from a path her menfolk took to get to higher ground when they hunted the aurochs, one of the ancestors of our domestic cattle.

J. L. R. Anderson has a theory that the path of the hunters was the origin of The Ridgeway, which he says has "a fair claim" to being the oldest road in Europe, a road stone-age men travelled before Britian was an island and yet is still in daily use today.

Anderson's recently published study of The Ridgeway (The Oldest Road—Wildwood House) says that while most of the road has disappeared in the past 2,000 years of its history it still runs 40 clearly-marked miles through some of the most beautiful and historic country in Britian, from a hill near the great pre-historic stone circle of Avebury to the Thames.

Anderson, a topographist, devoted much research to The Ridgeway because, he said, it represents not only a hiker's paradise and a journey in time but also because his forebears have lived near it for 1,000 years.

"You walk in the footsteps of 300 generations," he said, "seeing the same rounded hills, the same sky, tripping, it may be, over the same stone that stubbed a human toe 10,000 years ago.

"In our time-bound life it is good to move out of time, to feel that all the human politics and triumphs and disasters of 10,000 years — or twice 10,000 years — have left the road you walk unchanged.

"Most travellers along The Ridgeway left no written record of their lives, but that is not to say they left no records. The road runs through a countryside rich with the relics of past people, graves of many different types and periods — long barrows apparently for group burial, round barrows for men, disc barrows for women; huge standing stones erected for purposes that can now only be guessed at, but erected with immense labor and impressive engineering skill; hill fortresses and dykes, flint workings that were major industrial undertakings 5,000 years ago."

Anderson says one of the reasons for the longevity of The Ridgeway is that it lies mostly above the spring line and there have never been any villages on it. It is high, exposed and lonely but it had the immense advantage of being clear of "the densely wooded jungle-like valleys below" where for many centuries it was perilous to venture.

Anderson has also studied what historical evidence there is that a British leader arose against the Roman occupation and became the King Arthur of the round table legends.

He leans to the theory that the legendary victory of Arthur at "Baden Hill," a site never identified, might actually have taken place somewhere near the village of Bayton in Ridgeway country.

Sometimes You Don't Notice Those Press Freedoms Fading

LONDON (Reuter) — Political censorship is increasing around the world and its growth sometimes goes unnoticed by the people whose freedoms are being eroded, according to the British quarterly, Index on Censorship.

Commonwealth investigators say the problem of censorship is not confined to those living under authoritarian regimes.

The British organization that publishes Index says even in the economically advanced countries of North America and Western Europe there are pressures on free expression that it would be perilous to ignore.

Founded by a number of leading literary figures, among them the poets W. H. Auden and Stephen Spender, the organization, which is called the Writers and Scholars Educational Trust, examines all forms of political censorship anywhere in the world and helps exiled writers.

It claims to be the only organization of its kind in the world.

The assistant editor of the magazine, Gorge Theiner, says "many people know very little about censorship in their own countries. We try to examine the problems of mass communication, but we're not in the business of attacking."

The trust's findings echo those of the Commonwealth Press Union (CPU) conference, which warned here in June that press freedom throughout the world was diminishing steadily.

The CPU reported that there now are more journalists in prison or under house arrest and more newspapers closed down by government action than ever before.

Much of the trust's practical work is concerned with helping those either in exile or unable to publish freely in their own country.

It cites the case of the former Soviet art historian, Igor Golomshtok, who emigrated as a Jew and applied to the trust for help in obtaining work and accommodation. He now teaches at St. Andrew's University in Scotland.

Theiner admits the trust is searching for an ideal without expectation of finding it.

"Censorship is relative," he says. "You wouldn't say that curbs on free expression in Western Europe were the same as those in the East but they exist all the same."

Index, which began early in 1972, has published a number of manuscripts from authors banned in their own countries.

Last year, it brought out an English version of an open letter by the exiled Russian author Alexander Solzhenitsyn to the Soviet ladership.

Theiner says there is evidence that the publication circulates among the intelligentsia in Communist Eastern Europe, passed around from hand to hand with instructions to keep it around for only a short time.

The publication has a circulation of around 4,000 and is financed totally from private donations.

Despite its limited circulation, the Index has produced important effects in a number

"We're not just a lot of do-The work has been cited at the European Commission on Human Rights and in the constitutional court in Sri Lanka during a hearing on the press.

"We're not just a lotof do-gooders crying in the wilderness," he says.

Drug Smugglers Now Trading On New Misery

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Mexican border smugglers have added a controversial cancer drug called laetrile to their list of profitable contraband items.

The drug is touted as a cancer cure by its supporters and called useless by American cancer researchers.

The U.S. attorney's office in San Diego has successfully prosecuted 18 cases of smuggling the banned drug into the United States since early 1974. Two major seizures of the drug have taken place in recent months.

Investigators say the international smuggling of so-called cancer medicines may some day rival the illicit narcotics trade.

For several years desperate, cancer-stricken Americans have crossed the border to get to Tijuana clinics where laetrile is dispensed legally. The patients pay an average of $30 daily for lodging and meagre "cancer diet" meals at the laetrile clinics.

Dr. Ernesto Contreas, 59, runs one such clinic on Tijuana's outskirts. He is believed to have treated as many as 5,000 American cancer patients who paid him an estimated $4 million.

In a recent U.S. Customs report, investigators said the seizures "indicate a large-scale conspiracy by several groups and individuals . . . Their motive is large quantity profiteering rather than humanitarian reasons."

A few of the same smugglers handle narcotics as well, the report said. But, unlike heroin and marijuana which come in a hundred hidden ways, laetrile almost always arrives by car across a port of entry.

Biochemist Ernest T. Krebs Jr., credited with developing laetrile—a product made basically from apricot extract—said recently in San Francisco that its value is great. The U.S. government and researchers such as those at the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Centre in New York disagree.

Dr. Lewis Thomas, the centre's president, said in April after two years of experiments on animals that laetrile offers no protective effects against cancer and is unable to prolong life. The American Cancer Society calls it a "possibly worthless nostrum."

Nevertheless, smuggling of laetrile has become a million-dollar business.

"It has grown tremendously in just the past year," says assistant U.S. attorney Herb Hoffman, heading a federal grand jury probe of the smuggling operations. "In the past, we used to get 300 to 500 vials—each enough for three injections daily. Now we're getting 1,000 at a time."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

For Sunday, August 10

ARIES (March 21 - April 10): Accent on contracts, partnerships, special agreements, public relations—and marriage. Exchange ideas. Get credit where due. Deal with Gemini, Virgo persons. Some significant changes occur and could involve travel.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Slow pace; be more diplomatic, especially to those who serve or work with you. Domestic adjustment also should be on agenda. Your voice, throat may require attention. You may be expending too much energy, sound in wrong direction. Family member will co-operate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with romance, creative endeavours, constructive changes. You may be involved in clandestine meeting, operation. One who appeared indifferent may now swing 180 degrees. There are puzzles to be solved, including situations and people. You'll see!

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Accent on health, employment, relationship that can no longer remain tepid. It is hot or cold, intensified or finished. Key is to be aware of what's good for you. You can't force issues or change people. Have pride in yourself —respect rights of others. Then make a decision.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): You learn more about what relative is doing, thinking and planning in connection with trip. You can tie loose ends—can evaluate potential. Popularity increases. More persons are intrigued with your ideas, concepts. ou could receive offer connected with publishing, distribution.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): New deal indicated in connection with money. Leo, Aquarius individuals could figure prominently. Accent is on what should be kept or discarded. Streamline procedures. Refuse to be held back by "emotional debris." Now is time to clear the air. You'll understand!

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Lunar cycle at peak; your judgment, intuition are honed to razor-sharpness. Trust yourself. Be independent in thought, action. A new contact proves valuable. Personal magnetism is emphasized. You could win popularity contest!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Accent is on hospital, institution or special group. You are called upon to speak up, to be a representative or to aid in charity drive. Remember resolutions, obligations. One who is "confined" deserves your understanding.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Friendship, affection and fulfillment of desire—these are spotlighted. What appeared a setback could boomerang in your favor. Gain shown through professional endeavor. One "in charge" pays meaningful compliment. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio could be in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Accent on standing in community, special assignment, prestige, advancement and dealing with those who pull strings of authority. Gemini, Virgo could figure prominently. You recieve go-ahead on project which tests your unique abilities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Strive for greater harmony, inner peace. Make meditation more than a word. Peace within domestic circle is a real possibility. Know it and do something about it. Make creative, intelligent concession.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Emphasis is on mystery the occult, expenses accrued in connection with partnership, cooperative enterprise. Keep tight rein on reality. Means don't get carried away by those who scheme, have pie-in-sky plans. Another Piscean—and a Virgo —could be involved. Perfect techniques.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, independent, fixed in your ways and views. members of opposite sex find you attractive. In October, there will be constructive changes, greater freedom of movement. You succeed when original, you fall back when you imitate or become part of a crowd. It is your nature to stand apart, to dance to your own tune. You could write, paint, direct operation which veers into unorthodox areas.

for Monday, August 11

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You could be surprised by action affecting legal standing, lease, agreement or contract. Domestic situation is accented. Taurus, Libra persons might be very much in picture. Do plently of listening, observing. Bide your time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): One who was once close may be working in different area. Adjustments are necessary. Be willing to assert views, needs. Don't sell yourself short. Keep resolutions concerning health, diet, vitamins. Pisces, Virgo persons are likely to be in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Give logic equal time with impulse. Overcome temptation to throw caution to winds. Organize. Get priorities in order. Your position is stronger than might be apparent on surface. Know it and be confident. Involvement with member of opposite sex is intensified.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Finish what you start — you are due now for greater degree of recognition. You can build on a more solid base. Get vaild appraisal. Check escrow procedures. Aries, Libra could figure prominently. Aggressive associate does have your best interests at heart.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent terms, finalizing agreement which affects domicile. New approach brings most constructive results. Some plans are tossed aside in favor of long-range proposition. Another Leo is likely to be in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are able to build, to get a nest egg, to perceive what is an obstacle and what is actual progress. Your ability to learn by teaching, sharing is emphasized. Relatives and money mix -- like oil and water.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Moon conjoins Pluto in your sign — coincides with time when you break loose, challenge authority, back beliefs with cash, when you tear down for ultimate purpose of rebuilding. You'll be on the go, socializing, making contacts, enlarging horizons — daring to be happy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have insights now which amaze others. You know what is being hidden, what is legitimate, what is bluff. Key is to know you know it and to act accordingly. Pieces fall into place. Your timing is on target. You win!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Desire is fulfilled but not as you might have expected. Get ready for surprises, quick change, a journey into the unorthodox. Gemini, Virgo and another Sagittarian could play prominent roles. A secret plan will be revealed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You get results due to professional efforts. Means you get something for something — no more, no less. Know it and be grown-up about it. Seductive claims should be taken with skepticism — and plenty of humor. Taurus, Libra could be involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may have difficulty articulating your needs. Key of your most important times is to ride with tide, to observe, to be open-minded, receptive—and to welcome spiritual awakening. This could be one —if you so permit.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Nothing now is tepid — it is all or nothing, hot or cold. Know it and realize that money, leases, taxes, insurance -- these areas must be given attention, preferably in concert with partner, mate. Cancer, Capricorn could figure prominently.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY if single, you could marry this year. March and December are your most important months of 1975. You are intuitive, able to illustrate meanings and dramatize beliefs. Aquarius, Cancer and Leo persons play important roles in your life. You have a large ego but you are generous and willing to teach others to make the most of their assets, talents.

DEATH BY LIGHTNING

Many of Tigran Petrosian's games are characterized by tranquillity in the opening and the quiet development of pieces. Then, as his opponent basks in the sunny knowledge that all is going well, lightning flashes out of the blue sky and strikes him down.

At the Chess Olympics in Nice, the former World Champion played on Board Four for the USSR and won a gold medal for getting the best score on that board.

Cash Card Ads Slapped

TORONTO (CP)—Cashbak International Inc., a company selling discount cards to consumers has been ordered to cease and desist unfair business practices by the ministry of consumer and commercial relations.

In the first ministry order under the new Business Practices Act, Douglas Turner, director of consumer protection division, said that Cashbak advertising used "exaggeration, innuendo and ambiguity".

Started last spring by Ben Vernon of Toronto, the organization offered lists of participating stores granting a discount of five to 25 per cent and more to customers presenting the green and white plastic Cashbak cards.

The cards cost $15 per year or $10 for senior citizens and students.

A World-Wide Anti-Drug Team Urged

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A special international police force should be created to combat the menacing drug problem, the head of criminal investigation for the RCMP in B.C. and the Yukon has suggested.

Chief superintendent Mark Marcus said in an interview that because drug dealing is a world-wide problem, a global approach will have to be developed sooner or later.

He called drug trafficking an "evolutionary process" and said that as long as producing countries are allowed to manufacture with impunity, the problem will continue to defy solution.

That, said Marcus, was the key to prevention.

"Waiting for drugs to hit our shores is like locking the barn door after the horse has bolted."

Marcus said that without international co-operation, the ability of national police forces to stem the flow of drugs will remain ineffective.

"I think the answer may lie in setting up a multi-nation drug squad composed of police officers from around the world.

"But even then if we are going to use enforcement as the final tool, we could not hope to achieve a reduction in drug use beyond a certain tolerable level . . . and that's all . . .

"Until we recognize the fact that alcohol and drugs are social and medical problem and not a police problem, then we're never going to see any change."

Marcus said the level of enforcement in B.C. over the past couple of years has been the best ever and attributed it to the creation of the co-ordinated law enforcement unit (Cleu), the increase in the number of undercover operations and a growing public awareness of the problem.

Since last September, he noted, there have been more than 400 persons prosecuted on major drug charges.

But the only effect has been a light reduction in the amount of heroin available . . . and "what's happening is heroin is being replaced with cocaine," Marcus said.

Members of the Victoria drug squad confirmed the drug trade is as strong as ever and added that dealers, to make up for supply shortages and to realize even larger profits, were diluting or "stepping on" drug dosages to a much greater degree.

A spokesman for the squad said that whereas a few years ago a cap of heroin was 15 to 20 per cent pure and sold for $15 to $25, today's cap is barely five per cent pure and sells for $45 to $50.

He cited the case of a young Victoria couple convicted recently of heroin trafficking who were found to be in possession of caps containing only one per cent of the drug, the rest made up of sugar and Epsom Salts. "Talk about a rip off," the spokesman remarked.

Although the heroin problem appears to be stabilizing in other parts of Canada, Marcus said, such is not the case in B.C.

So great has been the proliferation here, he declared, that "Virtually every community in the province has at least one resident addict."

"Drug activity used to be confined to the urban centres. But not any more. Now it's in the rural areas too with traffickers using such means as the mail service to distribute their drugs, all of which makes apprehension very difficult."

He said there was no "definable trafficking situation" and contrary to popular opinion, there was no Mr. Big controlling the illicit trade. Rather, more and more "amateurs" are starting to dabble in the market attracted by both the tremendous profits that can be made and the relative ease in handling the product.

He said police know the names of those bankrolling the illicit dealings — the "10 per centers" who never come into physical contact with the drugs — but getting sufficient evidence to prosecute is another matter.

"That's why we are now looking more and more into conspiracies."

Effect of Wood Probe Touches Us All

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Public policies emanating from the royal commission on forest resources will touch the lives of all British Columbians, according to Jack Wessel, manager of financial services for the B.C. Federation of Agriculture.

"It is one of the most important inquiries in the history of the province and will affect us as individuals and as resource groups," he said.

His views are shared by all resource managers — fisheries, water, recreation, real estate, mining — as the royal commission under Dr. Peter Pearse prepares to hold its first public hearing at Prince George Tuesday.

The commission will sit in Nelson on Sept. 2, Prince Rupert Sept. 11 and in Victoria and Vancouver later in the fall.

The inquiry will deal with land-use and management, which affects all British Columbians and provides revenue to the provincial treasury for public services.

Ninety-five per cent of B.C.'s 134 million acres of forest lands is public owned, but most of it was leased out in the fifties and sixties to multi-national forest companies.

In leasing the land, the government of the day made no allowances for the expansion of cities and for the establishment of new townsites.

It overlooked the fisheries, recreation, agriculture and water resources and ignored guidelines for the management of the land.

For example, government studies in the past four years show that the reforestation program is lagging.

Other studies showed the province was not receiving adequate revenues from its forest lands and that revenues were dropping yearly.

Dr. Pearse, who left for Prince George Thursday, has no illusions about the task facing the commission.

"The commission is dealing with an aspect of public policy which will affect the economic health of the province and the character of our environment," he said.

He admits the demand for land has never been greater.

People, he observed, are demanding land for small holdings on Vancouver Island, the Gulf Islands, Queen Charlotte Islands and in the interior.

There is also an apparent problem in certain urban centres where forest tenures appear to be impeding development," he added. "People also want more land for recreation."

The problem facing the commission, he said, is how to "reconcile a multiplicity of demands on land and resources — recreation, agriculture, forestry, real estate, water and so on."

He noted that under tree farm licence contracts (land leased to companies) there are very limited provisions for the deletion of lands from the licenced area for other uses during the duration of the contract.

"The commission will certainly have to examine the provisions of these contracts," he stated.

But there are many other issues to be submitted by resource groups which the commission will have to cope with. One of these is whether forest companies should make use of forest legislation to accumulate land for real estate purposes.

Legislation passed in the early fifties gave forest companies tax concessions for land used for growing trees. The object of the legislation was to encourage timber production on company-owned lands.

Some logging companies took advantage of the legislation. They bought land and turned it into tree farms to enjoy the tax concessions, but planned to sell it as real estate.

The same matter is under study in Ontario.

Another problem facing the commission is what to do when the tree farm licences come up for renewal in 1976.

The problem first came to light when a government study showed the leased land contained much more timber than the forest inventory showed.

The inventory of these public lands was carried by the forest companies and approved by the government's B.C. Forest Service.

Conservationists at the public hearings, will mainly press for improved forest management practices, such as the protection of rivers and streams and protection of subalpine areas where trees can take hundreds of years to grow.

Many people agree, the big difference with the commission's hearings compared to the Sloan 1955 royal commission, is grass root participation.

SOCIETY SEEKS FUNDS FOR SWAN LAKE STUDY

The Swan Lake-Christmas Hill Nature Centre Society is seeking assistance from individuals and groups to help finance an all-year-round study of plants, animals and birds in the Swan Lake aret.

The society's treasurer is A. H. Roberts of 1750 Glastonbury.

Saanich has contributed $3,000 to finance a study being carried out from June until the end of this month by zoologist Teresa Shephard and biologist Wayne Zaccarelli.

To be really effective, Shepard said today the study should be on a 12-month basis.

She has been using tape recordings of screech owls, great horned owls and the Virginia rail in an effort to get more information for her inventory of plant and animal life around the lake. There has been no response because the study was started too late in the season.

Her inventory, due at the end of August, will include recommendations for the siting of public paths and teaching areas and suggest how fragile areas should be protected.

Zaccarelli is studying the lake itself. Shepard said she would recommend no boats, even canoes, be allowed on the lake, as they would frighten away the birds.

PENSIONS UP IN OCTOBER

OTTAWA (CP) — Monthly old age security payments will be increased by $3.77 in October to $129.53, the new consumer price index indicates.

Old age security, the basic flat-rate pension for 1.9 million persons over 65, is one of four federal welfare payments indexed to provide higher payments as the consumer price index rises.

Old age security and guaranteed income supplements for needier pensioners are adjusted quarterly. Canada Pension Plan and family allowance payments are adjusted annually.

The July index, published today, was 186.5, up from 184 in June. The indicated increases in benefits are based on formulas in the Old Age Security and Family Allowance Acts and the Canada Pension Plan.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

"Don't you ever get tired of looking at clothes?" people sometimes ask us . . . Never! (Well, hardly ever as the G and S Admiral would say!) Anyway we never get tired of seeing the beautiful things which keep arriving at the stores we tell you about here! . . . Take Wilson's, for instance . . . the first of the Auckie Sanft fall shipment has arrived and it certainly bodes well for what's yet to come! . . . Browsing amongst new arrivals still in the shipping room we saw pantsuits in a closely-woven 100% wool fabric called Twilladene . . . Colors are Blue Bell . . . rather like royal but less vivid, and Seafoam, a neutral greyish green . . . These have double-breasted jackets with coachman collar, and straight pants that zip up the side . . . There's a single-breasted topcoat with back yoke . . . very good on a larger woman, we thought . . . Some double-breasted topcoats with tie belts and a wide tuck running from each shoulder both front and back . . . Green and russet in these . . . Feather-weight tweed suits button to the neck, which is finished with a small collar . . . Predominating shades of plums, blues and greens . . . One jacket dress with short sleeves and tailored V-neck jacket . . . There'll be more coming in though, and we certainly recommend that you have a look at these Auckie Sanft things if you're in need of something smart for fall . . . W and J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177 and 1210 Newport Ave., 592-2821.

The big day's drawing near! . . .

More news about Standard Furniture's exciting new lighting shop, which should be unveiled in all its glory in the very near future . . . First of all, the name: Really a triumvirate of shops, with three rooms to be designated respectively: "Lamp Works" (for table lamps etc.) . . . "Light Works" (Chandeliers and such) . . . and "Art Works" . . . (devoted to unusual and rare imported accessories) . . . Peter Gazeley, who's in charge of the whole show, took us down into the nether regions of the store the other day where, behind padlocked doors, repose some of the gorgeous accessories destined for this latter "Art Works" . . . We caught our breath when we saw collection of baskets handwoven in Sardinia from local reeds and grasses . . . Produced by the coil method, . . . somewhat reminiscent of that done by the Salish Indians . . . the designs derive from primitive cultures . . . Colors are earthy, made from natural dyes, and shapes and balance are marvels . . . so very contemporary, in our terms . . . Also from Italy are many objects made from reclaimed wood . . . copies of museum pieces . . . More wooden pieces from Spain . . . Among the latter, a glorious tall Madonna and Child carved from a solid piece of antique oak . . . Much, much more . . . which space doesn't permit us to tell you about now . . . but just you wait! Once this new lighting shop is open, you'll see things you'll go mad over! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

Perfect shirtdresses for day or evening . . .

Friend of ours confided to us the other day that she's at long last found "her" store . . . a store where she can usually find exactly what she wants at a price she can afford to pay . . . And where is this paragon, we asked? . . . Why, Roy Imports, of course! . . . And on that note we can only say Amen! . . . This week when we visited Roy's we were especially impressed with their collection of hand-woven wool dresses from Ireland. Both long and short, they have the John Hagarty of Dublin label . . . and while they're shirtdress styles, they seem to fit better than a lot of shirtdresses we've seen . . . Don't just hang like bags . . . have more underarm space . . . Among the long dresses for after-five, or at-home wear, we admired the beautiful orangey tone-on tone check . . . a smart black and white check, and a gorgeous green . . . Just $85 for these . . . while the "poodle tweed" dresses . . . same wool fabric with raised windowpane checks in self color . . . have a double ruffle right down the front . . . Red, cream or turquoise, tagged at $115 . . . Classic shirtdresses in daytime length come in the most delightful colors, are most reasonably priced at $65 . . . Then there are John Hagarty long skirts in that poodle tweed we told you about . . . They're cut on the bias with a wide flare, and when you look at them you'll notice how beautifully the checks are matched . . . Great bottoms for tailored shirts or pullovers . . . $87.50 at . . . Roy Imports, 817 Government St., 384-4737.

On the bias is the interesting way to wear stripes or tweeds.

We used to think that birthstones were lucky only to people born in the month the stone stands for . . . but with age, experience, and, we trust, wisdom . . . we've come to realize that anyone who owns a fine gem is lucky for life, regardless of the time of year! . . . Howsoever, we'd like to remind you that the beautiful olive green peridot is the birthstone for August, and that de Goutiere has some peridot jewellery that made us literally turn green with envy! . . . First a lovely ring set with a fine quality emerald cut peridot, with three small diamonds on either side. It costs $1200 . . . but there are other peridot pieces considerably less expensive . . . like the three-stone peridot ring at $89.50 . . . Drop earrings with pretty peridot stones, priced at $79.50 . . . and some charming little earrings in a textured gold oak leaf design with a small peridot at the tip of each . . . $60 . . . A new ring has just arrived . . . a rare and unusual stone from Africa called Tanzanite . . . It's a very fiery blue stone with pink overtones . . . set between groups of marquis and round diamonds . . . Reminded us of a sapphire, but it's much more brilliant . . . This is set high in white gold, and costs $2375 . . . de G. showed us a new estate ring he's recently received . . . a 2.22 carat diamond solitaire in a high yellow gold setting . . . While the diamond isn't perfect, it's very nicely cut . . . and is priced at one third off its replacement value . . . de Goutiere Ltd., 2524 Estevan Ave., 592-3224.

Don't shorten your new clothes too soon . . . wear them a few times to let your eye get accustomed to the longer length.

The most wanted coats in town! . . .

Seems like just about everyone in Victoria . . . man, woman and child . . . want a duffle coat once the wind starts blowing chill . . . which just proves what sensible people we are . . . Anyway duffles have been arriving from England, and as far as ladies' coats are concerned, you'd have to go a long way to find a better selection, both as to qualities and colors, than those newly arrived at Charmante's! . . . Styles are all the same . . . bone toggles, attached hood, length that's equally good with pants or casual skirts . . . but there are several qualities of fabric, depending on wool content and softness of texture . . . Prices start at $70 . . . and at this price you'll find off-white, red, bright green and dark brown, without lining . . . Regular quality coats with plain lining are $75 . . . Grey, camel, navy and air force blue . . . Camel with cream lining, $100 . . . and with a bright plaid lining, $115 . . . A smart white with self-lining is priced at $115 . . . and there are other coats of double-face wool . . . beige with green, navy with blue and grey with blue . . . Sizes run from 8 to 18 . . . Now that summer's past its peak, many of you will be thinking about school and University wardrobe needs . . . Whatever else you get, remember that a warm duffle coat can be your best friend! . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Eaton's fabric Garden has just blossomed forth in a beautiful display of Viyellas . . . both plains and patterned . . . and after viewing these choice fabrics with their soft, subtle colors and charming designs . . . we're not a bit surprised that our American friends are going for them in such a big way! . . . Viyella, as you doubtless know, is 45% wool and 55% long-stapled cotton . . . perfectly washable and guaranteed unshrinkable . . . truly the "most natural fabric in the world"! . . . New at Eaton's this season, after a lapse of several years, is Clydella . . . same as Viyella except that it has a higher cotton content making it extra easy to launder and thus, ideal for children's clothing of all kinds . . . practical for men's work shirts . . . Clydella, in authentic tartans, 36" wide, is priced at $5 a yard . . . Plain Viyellas are the same price . . . and you should just see the vast array of colors! White, off-white, dusty rose, pink, navy, red, gold, denim and Copen blues, beige, brown and the new olive green . . . Printed Viyellas, in a variety of plaids, florals, paisleys and small prints, are tagged at $6 . . . There are plain colors to co-ordinate with the prints . . . which we swear must be the prettiest prints made! . . . Eaton's, fabric Garden, 382-7141, loc. 233.

Visit the lands down-under . . .

People who have been to Australia and New Zealand invariably go into ecstasies of praise about the magnificent scenery . . . the fine cities . . . the friendly people and the fascinating things to see and do in these lands of the Antipodes . . . Certainly starts one thinking in terms of next winter's holiday . . . especially when you realize that when it's winter here, it's summer there! . . . Paulin's told us about four great new ways to see these lands down-under in a manner that will let you do what you want to do . . . Quantas and CP Air are co-operating in offering an incredible combination of ways you can spend a holiday in Australia and New Zealand . . . You fly to either country where you are met and taken to your hotel for the first night . . . Then you can start on one of the many package tour . . . fly/coach, fly/rail, fly/drive or fly/tour. # The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: I understand it's a cinch to take your dog into Russia?

DEAR F.B.: Right. All you need is a trip to the doctor for a rabies vaccination, an examination, and appropriate rabies and health certificates. There is a slight rub once you're inside the U.S.S.R., however. Dogs are not permitted in most, if not all, hotels. Since canine campsites and human ones too, for that matter, are hard to come by, better figure out in advance how and where you and your dog will be spending your nights once you get there.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've had Lincoln, a colonial love bird, for several years and he's always been in excellent health. Then a friend gave us their love bird, which we put in the same room, but not with or right next to Lincoln for fear they might fight. Since then, Shad, the new bird, looks reasonably good, but Lincoln's looking worse all the time. Is he lonesome, or jealous, or what? Would they be better off together, or like they are. They can see and hear each other, but they certainly don't seem to be benefitting from each other's company. Could Shad have had a disease he brought to Lincoln that isn't making him sick but is affecting Lincoln? It's all very mysterious, and discouraging. — F.A.

DEAR F.A.: Maybe a local bird-oriented veterinarian could help unravel the mystery. That, at last, is a logical first step. It's possible Shad could be the carrier of a disease that is now affecting Lincoln. It's also possible Lincoln has a medical problem of his own. Could be, even, he has a psychological problem related to the presence of the new bird. Love birds are a highly social species usually doing best when either in close association with another bird or alone. The in-between arrangement, such as you now have, is often distrubing to these birds, sometimes to the point of causing severe psychological and physiological changes. One worthy step, on a trial basis at least, might be to place Shad out of sight and sound range, thus removing him as a possible source of frustration.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I know you don't publish brand names in your column, so I'll just mention the two different kinds of canned dog food I buy, one of which is much more expensive than the other. Naturally my dog likes the more expensive brand. But what I'm really wondering is, am I getting more nutrition, am I getting more for my money, by buying him that more expensive can? Or am I just spoiling him? I get so many differences of opinion on this it's quite confusing. — R.V.

SEAR R.V.: Let's start by saying better quality dog food in general is not a waste of money. There are nutritional benefits in the better brands which do make a difference to the dog over a long period of time. Cheapie brands, even though the label may sound good, can't compete except on price with the better brands.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Donna Duck has some real sore feet. She looks like she has infected corns or something on the bottom of her feet. She limps on both her feet, and that's hard for a duck. They must be sore. What's the best thing to put on those sore spots so they'll heal? — M.S.

DEAR M.S.: Presumably you're describing bumblefoot, a condition most often seen in fowl whose feet spend a good deal of time on a hard surface. The most effective treatment is surgical removal of these swollen, sensitive area, using a local anesthetic, followed by suturing. After surgery, the doctor would recommend Donna be detained on fresh grass or other clean, soft surface while the wounds are healing and, for that mtter, preferably afterward, too Bumblefoot is seldom seen under these ideal conditions.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I'm a user and defender of vitamins whenever possible. Truthfully, I've been called a nut on the subject. I keep stuffing them down myself and my animals anyway. I've just read the flat statement in a scientific magazie that vitamis are of no value in prevention or in treatment of cat leukemia. Would you personally agree with a statement like that? — G.M.

DEAR G.M.: First, about vitamins in general, I'd comment they're often abused, overused and occasionally themselves cause pet problems up to an including death. Concurrently, however, I feel vitamins are not used as effectively as they might be in prevention and treatment of animal diseases. Even in leukemia of cats, vitamins play a role. In fact, one form of leukemia (megaloblastic erythroleukemia) may be specifically caused by vitamin deficiency.

Welch Medical Report

By DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

There is a great deal of confusion about exactly what curvature of the spine is in the minds of many mothers who are worried about the posture of their young ones.

With many slouching and sway-backed youngsters, there is no real problem other than poor posture, which will probably correct itself in time. But with others, there can be organic problems that require careful study and should be managed by experts in bone problems (orthopedists).

There are three major types of spinal deformity. The most common one is scoliosis, in which the spinal column bends to the right or left, often rotating or twisting as well.

The second type of deformity, kyphosis, is an exaggerated rounding of the upper back or a loss of the normal inward curve of the lower back above the buttocks.

The third type, lordosis, is an increase in the normal inward curve of the lower back, or a lack of the normal rounding of the upper back.

It is thus normal to have a certain amount of upper-back kyphosis and a certain amount of lower-back lordosis. Scoliosis, on the other hand, is always abnormal, its seriousness depending on how marked the spinal curvature is and the degree to which it rotates the spinal column.

It has been found, as a result of school screening programs, that about 10 per cent of children between the ages of 10 and 13 have some degree of spinal deformity, and most of these require only to be observed periodically to determine whether the abnormality is progressing or not.

According to recently published figures, about one to two per cent in this age group are found to have deformities sufficiently severe to require some form of specific treatment.

Orthopedic specialists stress that early detection is the most important single factor in the management of curvature of the spine if later complications such as interference with the function of the heart and lungs are to be avoided.

Dr. Robert B. Winter of the University of Minnesota Medical School in a recent review of the subject points out that the management of identified curvatures of the spine falls into three phases:

First, where the changes are minimal, regular check-ups are mandatory to see whether the deformity is progressive or stable.

Second, when a deformity is present and is within certain limits, if correction is deemed necessary it may be undertaken with a brace. Brace treatment is used primarily to arrest early curvature that show signs of progressing.

The third phase is for those with more severe deformity and consists of surgical correction in which the spine is straightened as much toward normal as it can be and then fixed in position by fusing the involved vertebrae into a solid column.

Specialists stress that in detecting scoliosis before it is advanced, x-rays of the spine should be taken in the upright standing position, because sometimes significant scoliosis is less readily recognized in film which are taken when the subject is lying down.

When surgical correction is advised for severe scoliosis, it is because such straightening is the only way we know to prevent the high incidence of serious problems that result in adult life from distortion of the chest cavity and interference with the normal function of the heart and lungs. It is also helpful in relieving pain in a twisted back.

Free For The Asking

By HARRIET HART

You will also discover the difference between so-called jams, including preserves, conserves and marmalades. Actual jams are made from fruit which is cooked with sugar until the mixture becomes thick. Preserves consist of fruit cooked in a syrup until it becomes somewhat translucent. Conserves are slightly thinner than jams and contain a mixture of two or three fruits and sometimes nuts. Marmalades are usually made from citrus fruits.

The booklet also tells you that a perfect jelly should hold its shape when turned out onto a plate and should quiver when the plate is moved.

Among unusual jams you may want to try are rhubarb and pineapple, citron preserve, cantaloupe and peach conserve or pear marmalade.

Why not also prepare some pickled onions, pickled peaches, green tomato chow-chow, corn relish, peach chutney or chili sauce! You will be delighted with the results.

The booklet offers dozens of other taste-tempting recipes.

She's Hanging In Until Man Returns

DEAR ABBY: I am married, although my husband is in prison. I do not go out with other men, and I don't entertain any, either. I live a clean, simple, uncomplicated life and am only trying to hang in there until my man comes home.

My problem is that most men think that I am "fair game" because I have no husband home. There are several in my neighborhood who insist that I am "lonely," hungry for a man and desperately in need of the company of one. I am tired of trying to straighten these guys out.

Maybe if you print this, they will get the message. Just because a woman is alone doesn't mean that she is available. — Waiting For My Man

DEAR WAITING: Hooray for you! And I hope your man on the inside reads this. It will make his day. God bless.

DEAR ABBY: In fairness to the many older people like myself who cannot eat a large meal at one sitting and who eat many times a day (which the doctors assure us is healthier, anyway), I would like to present the side of the majority on "doggie baggers."

We enjoy restaurant eating every now and then, but my husband resents paying today's prices only to see half of my meal returned to the kitchen uneaten and then hearing me say, "I'm hungry" two hours later. Since asking for a doggie bag is frowned upon in some restaurants, a simple solution for me is to carry my own plastic bags.

Yes, I do this in some friends' homes, too. If you ask for a very small portion, the hostess thinks you ate before you came. And if you leave half of it on your plate, she thinks you didn't like it. But if you're truthful, the hostess is delighted to let you take your portion home to enjoy for several meals.—Woof Woof

DEAR WOOF WOOF: I'm with you all the way. Many restaurants offer "a child's" portion at a reduced price, of which many senior citizens also take advantage.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 40-year-old, and I have a problem. I always cry at sad movies, hymns, sad stories, parades and beautiful skaters.

Soon my son will be getting married. The plans for the church ceremony sound just beautiful and end with my son's presenting me with a single red rose! The thought of it sends chills up my spine.

I don't want to embarrass my son or husband by blubbering.

Do you have any suggestions? (I'm on hormones, so it's not the menopause.) Thank you.—Sentimental.

DEAR SENTIMENTAL: Being told in advance will prepare you for the presentation. I'm sure there won't be a dry eye in the house, so if you shed a tear or two, you won't embarrass anyone. Good luck and God bless.

Pot Smokers, Winter Sport Don't Mix

OTTAWA (CP) — Everyone knows drinking and driving seldom mix but research now indicates smoking cannabis and winter sports don't mix either.

The danger, warned Dr. Ian Henderson, chairman of the Canadian Medical Association (CMA) committee on pharmacotherapy, is that cannabis seems to impair the body's ability to adapt to the cold.

"We know it affects the hypothalamus, a part of the brain which controls most of the body's glands and the shivering reflex as well," he said in an interview here Wednesday.

"Without shivering the body tends to take on the ambient temperature, the temperature around it, and this could have disastrous effects," he added.

One effect is hypothermia, excessive cooling of the body, which can lead to an irregular heart beat and death.

However, research so far has been done only on animals, not humans, and the results are not conclusive, Dr. Henderson said.

"Cannabis has traditionally been heavily used in hot countries like India and the effect of cold and cannabis on humans has not really been documented."

In experiments on cats, a dose of one to two milligrams per kilogram of delta 9 THC (the active chemical in cannabis) reduces body temperature by as much as six degrees Celsuis.

"It's hard to give an exact equivalent of this dose for humans, but it's probably equal to smoking three good-sized joints, marijuana cigarettes, in quick succession."

People in the far north or people engaged in winter sports or sports where they are exposed to extreme cold—skiing, snowmobiling, skydiving or diving in cold water — should be careful, he warns.

"What happens if your snowmobile runs out of gas and you're stuck out someplace in the snow, unable to shiver to keep yourself warm?" he asked.

"You've got to be realistic and admit that many young people have probably smoked cannabis and done these things with no trouble, but there's still a good chance of danger."

He said research on animals indicated that a small dose of cannabis stimulated body temperature slightly, but larger doses caused drastic temperature drops.

World Women's Meet in Mexico Not First

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Each time I've read the International Women's Year conference in Mexico City was the first such gathering of women from around the world, a niggling doubt has surfaced as to the authenticity of that statement.

Last weekend I went browsing through some of my reference books and I came up with the fact (which must have been buried deep in my subconscious or I wouldn't have been doubtful) that there was a world congress of women, 82 years ago.

There was a daily gathering throughout the life of the exposition, where women from many places in the world "expressed ideas regarding the social, business and political affairs of humankind an all that pertains to making a greater future for the human race."

In the ideas advanced women of that day apparently were not so different from the public-spirited women who attended the United Nations conference in Mexico City recently.

They, too, were fighting for many of the same things and working "to make the future a better place to live."

Mrs. Bertha Palmer, a Chicago socialite dedicated to public service, was president of what was named "the board of lady managers," for that congress.

In her remarks on opening day she pointed out "we have taken advantage of the opportunity presented by the exposition to bring together such evidence of woman's skill in the various industries, arts and professions as may convince the world that ability is not a matter of sex."

Twenty nations and each of the United States had women speaking in the various sessions.

Among them was Adelaide Hoodless who during the 52 years of her life founded or helped to found the YWCA, the National Council of Women, the Victorian Order of Nurses, Macdonald Institute at Guelph in Ontario, the School of Household Science affiliated with McGill University and the Women's Institute organizations.

She had been extremely active in initiating and encouraging women's movements in Great Britain (as she was also to do in Canada) and she was eager to talk to other organization-minded women.

There were discussions on women as political economists, women in law, medicine and religion; women in politics, journalism, and as investors and financiers.

The arts were not forgotten, nor were the underprivileged in many lands.

It was said that "women and electricity were the two forces making the greatest progress of the age."

Kindergartens were described as "attempting to do for children, what should be done for them but is not always done, in the family home."

Faintly familiar are the words of a woman speaking on higher education, who said "apparently too many of our students go through their courses for no better reason than to say they have done it."

Hygiene and foods were on the agenda. Education of Indian girls, the encouragement of home industries and the need for effective voting.

When the last session was concluded and the exposition closed its gates, Mrs. Palmer said there had been no attempt to demonstrate any theory or to realize Utopian ideals, only a desire to present the actual conditions existing, in order to give a basis to build on for future improvement.

Evidence gathered during the sessions showed the tendency of modern life (remember this was 82 years ago) was to remove women more and more from the seclusion of the home, also that (even then) the larger proportion of women in the world of work, were married or widowed, and there to maintain their homes and children.

Technical training and education were necessary, it was decided, to give women equal opportunities with men.

There is no doubt that Women's Congress at the Columbian World Exposition in 1893 was the dramatic starting point for a great many present-day women's activities.

It was there the idea of national organizations was born in the minds of the Canadians. There that women around the world began to realize co-operative effort would increase the effectiveness of their work to improve society.

There, too, that a foundation was laid for everything that has gone into the women's movement around the world — since that time including the United Nations IWY Conference in Mexico City.

Sober Revelations On Eating Habits

By MARY MOORE

No coaxing. No preaching.

Simply repeating sober revelations by nutritionist Dr. Joan Woodhill of Australia about the deplorable eating habits of North Americans.

We are doing ourselves in.

We overeat and grow fat. We eat too many sweets and have tooth decay.

We consume too many convenience and empty calorie foods. We do not need or utilize as much meat as we eat.

At the same convention of 400 Canadian dietitians at Moncton, Dr. Pomare of the gastrointestinal unit of the Victoria Hospital in London, Ontario, recommended that whole grains, fruits and vegetables replace the refined sugars and white flours which have predominated our menus for the past fifty years.

Many of the most common diseases of western society have appeared only recently. These are still rare or virtually unknown in primitive communities. Such illnesses as coronary heart disease, obesity, cancer, diverticular disease, irritable bowel syndrome, hemorrhoids, gallstones, appendicitis and hiatial hernia, which are common to our civilization are relatively new to our world.

They are potentially preventable or even treatable simply by a change in diet. Unless a diet includes some form of fibre every day, it cannot be considered balanced. To put it in balance, Dr. Pomare suggests eating an unrefined carbohydrate diet, low in or even excluding refined products such as sugar and white flour. It is up to you now to correct your eating habits.

As you know I have been coddling you along suggesting you eat—make your own—whole wheat bread; homemade soups; homemade health cereals; urging you to cook your vegetables in as little water as short a time as possible, preferably in a collapsible vegetable steamer; advising you to eat your orange as soon as you peel it; eat an apple a day; eat fresh fruits in season; reduce servings.

Write to me for recipes for whole grain breads, homemade soups, homemade health cereals and fresh salads, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope and 10c for each recipe requested.

NOTE: Write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton, Ont., enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope and 10c for each specified recipe.

MOVE IT! PROJECT HERE NEXT WEEK

Move It!

That's what the provincial government hopes the visually handicapped will be doing in Victoria next week.

A pilot project, Move It! is a program of body awareness training for the visually handicapped and will be held Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

It will be held at the Oak Bay Senior Citizen's Centre at 1442 Monterey and is also open to interested senior citizens, friends or relatives.

The program will teach movement skills, grace and poise in social and work situations by combining dance, yoga techniques and body awareness training tailored to fit special needs.

Team members include specialists in movement education, kinesiology, dance, recreation and special education. Also, two members are themselves visually handicapped and serve as both teachers and consultants.

Move It: is operated through the leisure services branch of the provincial secretary's department.

More information may be obtained by calling 387-6271.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Suffering Deserves Compassion

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Sigmund Freud suffered greatly during the last years of his life. In 1938 the Nazis occupied Vienna, where Freud had spent most of his life, and he sought, and was given, refuge in London. The following year he died there from cancer of the jaw from which he had suffered for 16 years and for which he had undergone 33 operations. He faced his suffering courageously, but, as one of his American followers, Lionel Trilling, said in an essay, "He had, of course, no religious faith to help him confront the gratuitousness of his suffering." The Judaism of Freud's fathers might have helped him in his suffering, but he did not avail himself of its resources.

Much suffering is indeed gratuitous—that is, without assignable reason or acceptable cause, inexplicable, seemingly underserved, utterly mysterious. The gratuitousness of suffering is a great obstacle to faith, probably the most serious challenge to the Christian interpretation of human existence. How can we believe that God is just and merciful and loving when he allows men and women and children to suffer so much?

Some suffering, of course, is punitive—that is punishment for one's failure to take proper care of oneself or punishment for one's misconduct. As Paul put it in his Letter to the Galatians, "Make no mistake about this: God is not to be fooled; a man reaps what he sows." Sometimes we do reap a harvest of suffering—and there may be little mystery about this kind of suffering.

Some suffering is seen to be remedial, tempering the will and strengthening the character. But here we are in danger of falling into a terrible complacency and sentimentality—particularly if we are not the sufferers who are said to be helped by their suffering. Some persons are led by their suffering to deeper sympathy and compassion than they would have if they had not suffered; some suffering is enriching of character and personality. But some suffering causes deterioration of character and personality, seriously injuring the sufferer at the very depths of his or her being. Suffering may teach a person to pray to God with hope and even with thanksgiving. And suffering may teach a person to curse God or to deny that God exists.

An intellectual resolving of the mystery of suffering seems to be quite beyond us. Biblical faith cannot explain the gratuitousness of suffering. But biblical faith can point the way through suffering to where it is not destructive of one's personhood. Baron von Hugel, a Roman Catholic lay theologian of two or three generations ago, put the issue in this way: "Christianity does not explain suffering; it shows us what to do with it."

We must not be so insensitive as to say that suffering can be remedial if we are not at the same time willing to help sufferers realize that we do care, care very deeply about their suffering. The word "compassion", after all, means quite literally, "suffering with". The Christian answer to the mystery of suffering is not in theory or speculation but in the caring community. With some sufferers it is not simply their suffering that leads them into utter despair but suffering in loneliness, feeling that no one else really cares. The "answer", then, to the gratuitousness of suffering, the intimidating mystery of suffering, is in our ministering to one another's suffering, in our demonstrating that we belong to a caring community.

Rights Battle Splits Church

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON

SANTIAGO (AP)—The human rights controversy in Chile has erupted in one of the country's most important Protestant church groups, and one faction wants its bishop ousted because he aids political refugees.

"I have a clear conscience," says Helmut Frenz, 41, the German bishop of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Chile, founded here in the late 19th century.

Seven congregations of the church sent an official letter to the ruling military junta demanding Frenz and four German ministers be expelled from Chile and the church itself dissolved.

The group, formed of German-speaking congregations and calling itself the co-ordination Council of Evangelical Lutheran Communities in Chile, described Frenz and the others as "a group of foreign ministers of foreign political tendencies."

The letter said the activities of Frenz in helping political refugees "conceals political actions directed from overseas. . . ."

This charge referred to the junta's continuing campaign which claims that "international Marxism-Leninism" has been carrying out a plot to crush the military government through propaganda and other actions.

The bishop, a German national, was elected to his post in 1970. His term ends next year.

Frenz has been embroiled in controversy since the Chilean armed forces toppled the leftist regime of the late Marxist President Salvador Allende in September, 1973.

He and other religious leaders in Chile established the Committee of Peace, an organization of volunteers to aid the families of thousands of Allende supporters who were arrested or simply disappeared after the coup.

Frenz was awarded the Nansen Medal, given for extraordinary service in the cause of refugees, in September, 1974, by the United Nations high commission for refugees.

But his work angered many of his congregation. Many now are influential landowners who reacted angrily to Allende's experiment in socialism which included massive expropriations of private farms. Some were financially ruined.

Frenz said in an interview he has "acted out of humanitarian concern and not for political reasons."

He said the German-speaking faction opposes him because of his work to bring into the church more Spanish-speaking Chileans who have embraced the Lutheran faith. Many German-speaking Chilean citizens, he said, who still cling to the old ways, do not want integration.

ON THE ROAD and headed for B.C. to stay is the well-known Christian singing couple Merv and Merla who plan to move to the west coast from their Toronto home this month. They will perform one concert August 14 at noon in Victoria's Centennial Square, and arrive under the auspices of the Vancouver Island Charismatic Layman's Committee.

Science of Mind Changed His Life

Dr. Chet Castellaw changed his life with the Science of Mind.

"I no longer feel sorry for myself. I have no need to feel hostile; if I'm experiencing something unpleasant it's up to me to change it," he said in an interview Thursday.

Minister of San Diego's Church of Religious Science, Castellaw and his wife and assistant minister Earlene are in Victoria for a seventh consecutive summer, offering public lectures.

The Science of Mind is a religion begun by an Ernest Holmes, who wrote: "Science of Mind is a way of thinking which gives you an awareness of spiritual principles on which you may rely. It shows you how to use the law of mind . . . think effectively or pray affirmatively for what you need."

About a dozen Victoria residents regularly attend the study group although 200 are on the Castellaw's mailing list, he said.

He calls the faith a Christian one which centres on meditation—by this means a person finds answers to life problems within himself, says Castellaw.

"When I was in need of answers I found them within," he said.

That discovery led him to probe more deeply into his thought and begin meditation, he said.

His thought has made him realize he can control his own life.

"We're conditioned to think life is something that happens to us, not something we can control," he said.

Most people are afraid to take control of their lives or admit it is possible because they would no longer be able to blame "fate" or "luck" for problems—they would have to shoulder the blame themselves, he said.

Life is not run by some second power, by some guiding hand stronger than ours, he said.

"There's no such thing."

Meditation taught Castellaw to make his own judgements rather than judge on the basis of his ethical training. It made him throw away such expressions as "good little boys don't do that sort of thing," he said.

His open lectures will be held today, Sunday and Monday at 7 p.m. in the Empress Hotel Charlotte Room.

'MINDLESS' CHURCH PROGRAMS HIT

By DAVID ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

The U.S. Federal Communications Commission, showered with 60,000 comments from the public, is considering a proposal to investigate limitations on free speech on radio and television stations owned or controlled by religious or sectarian groups.

Last December, two California men, Jeremy Lansman and Lorenzo Milan, filed a petition with the FCC seeking three things:

—Revision of rules permitting multiple ownership of non-commercial educational radio and television stations in a single market.

—Asking for a "freeze" on all applications by government-owned and controlled groups for reserved educational FM and TV channels.

—Asking for a "freeze" on all applications by religious groups for reserved educational FM and TV channels.

In their petition Lansman and Milan said that while some religious programming was certainly worthwhile, they attacked much of the broadcasting as "mindless, banal programming aimed at some spiritless oleaginous God."

It was the third part of the petition that drew the heaviest response — some 60,000 comments attacking the petition with "a couple dozen" in favor, according to lawyers involved with the case.

The period for public comment has now been closed and Lansman and Milan have been given a chance to respond to the comments.

In their reply the two men said the comments precipitated by the petition — the second highest number ever received by the FCC — "reflects a good deal of confusion" about what the two sought.

"Petitioners did not suggest that the commission censor or even review individual programming judgments of religious or any other broadcast licenses," they said.

Instead, they said, they wanted an investigation "into the restrictions on free speech regularly practiced" by religious groups who broadcast on channels reserved by the FCC for "educational" programming.

The case involves some of the touchiest and murkiest areas of the constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press and separation of church and state.

In their reply to the comments, Lansman and Milan said they did not question the right of religious groups to control commercial frequencies but only the use of non-commercial reserved frequencies.

"They are not concerned with religion but rather with education," the petition said. "The basis of this complaint is that the unique relationship and resulting constitutional tension between religious proselytizing and secular education raises sufficient doubt to warrant further commission inquiry."

The FCC has three possible avenues of action it can take on the issue — reject the position out of hand; grant the relief sought by Milan and Lansman; institute a formal rule-making procedure.

Lawyers feel there is little chance the FCC will grant the relief sought by Lansman and Milan. There is more of a chance, they believe, it will institute hearings and a possibility it might reject the petition out of hand.

There is also the possibility the FCC could separate the three requests made by the two and act on each of them separately.

Drop 'Invisible' Role, Alberta's Aged Told

By JANET BLISS

EDMONTON (CP) — The biggest hurdles facing education for seniors in Alberta are lack of communication and initiative from both institutions and concerned community groups.

"The facilities aren't lacking, they just aren't geared to bring in the seniors," Bill Harper, 71-year-old public relations officer for the Alberta Council on Aging, said in an interview.

"But it goes deeper than lack of communication," she said.

"Nobody has really given it any thought before. Senior citizens have been an invisible part of society for a long time."

It is this "invisible" role the council is urging the province's 400 senior citizens' groups to abandon.

"The groups themselves have to look for the opportunity to use the educational facilities available," Mr. Harper said.

Education is only one area of life for the elderly that the council is concerned with, but it has been receiving increased attention in recent months.

A special committee on continuing education was set up by the council in the fall of 1974 and is conducting a survey of secondary and post-secondary institutions in Alberta to determine what is available for seniors and to bring it to their attention.

"Many people of our age had very little background and narrow interests during their life," Mr. Harper said. "When work stopped, life often stopped, because there was no interest left."

The council is trying to show, he said, that "when you retire, you don't retire from anything, you retire to something."

Many of the universities, technical schools and colleges in Alberta offer free or reduced tuition to people over 65 who wish to enrol in courses.

However, the response has not been overwhelming. In 1974, only 16 seminars registered and received remission on fees for winter session courses taken at University of Alberta, which offers all seniors tuition-free studies.

Dr. Stan Clarke, director of special sessions at the university, said in an interview that the main problem seemed to be "people just don't know about it."

Dr. Clarke and the Harpers agree that it is not a lack of interest on the part of the elderly that accounts for low attendance.

In May, the university's department of extension and special sessions office, in collaboration with the council, was host at a three-week spring session for seniors.

The courses, funded by a $20,000 grant from the department of advanced education, were offered free to Alberta residents over 65, including transportation and room and board.

Puppets to Tell Creation Story

A Victoria puppeteer who spreads Baha'i through puppet shows will give one last performance before moving from Victoria this month.

Vivien Combe — who has used puppets to teach about her faith since 1968 — moves to Honolulu, Hawaii, Aug. 25 where she will continue her volunteer work.

The retired Victoria resident who spent years in theatr both acting and designing decided seven years ago she could best teach Baha'i principle through a performing art.

Since then she has taught puppetry and Baha'i in the south Atlantic island of St. Helena where she spent two years and in Hawaii.

Combe now creates all her own puppets and has about 50 of them in her apartment ranging in height and style.

She plans a show Sunday at 8 p.m. in the lounge of the Princess Patricia apartment, 701 Esquimalt.

The show will tell the creation story and the movement toward world unity Baha'is work for.

"We believe that the world is one country, and the puppets are of every color and every race," she said.

POPE GREETS 19 RIDERS

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul welcomed 19 French Roman Catholics who rode more than 800 miles on horseback from Avignon to mark the Holy Year observance.

The French group — including men, women and two boys nine years of age, took one month across the Alps and country roads to reach Rome.

SACRED FOLK MUSIC sung by "Carol, Dean and Mark" will be the agenda in a Grace Lutheran Church performance August 11 in Victoria. Trio members are from Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma, Wash., and will sing at the church, 1273 Fort St., at 8 p.m. Carol and her husband Dean are PLU graduates and Mark is a university junior. Their repertoire includes Gregorian chant, folk psalms and lively tunes.

Apemen 'Seen' In India

By RAM SUNDAR
CP Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — When dusk falls in the forests of Arunachal in northeast India, huge bonfires are lit.

The bonfires are not meant to keep away the cold, for the sturdy mountain people of the Himalayas have thick handmade woollen shawls to protect them from the sharp wind.

It is the mysterious apemen the Arunachal tribesmen are worried about. Despite government assurances that no such apemen have come to the notice of forest officials the local peasants believe that a 1,500-year-old legend has come true.

According to the legend of the Apa Tani warrior tribe, "men huge as rocks and tall as trees shall come down from the mountains to establish their own kingdom."

Several peasants claim to have seen the apemen. Leading newspapers like Calcutta Statesman asked their correspondents in Shillong, the biggest city in northeast India and capital of Meghalaya state, to rush to the area and investigate the reports.

So far, no confirmation has come. On the contrary, the Shillong correspondent of The Statesman reported that the apeman just does not exist.

But the local people persist in saying that at least two apemen have been seen in the Khampti forest area.

K. D. Singh, tn experienced shikari (hunter) of the adjoining state of Manipur, says the tribesmen may be right "partly."

Singh claims to have seen an official report in which there are reported references to members of a primitive tribe with huge and hairy bodies.

According to one Bengali-language newspaper, these "apelike" men may belong to a lost Himalayan mountain tribe that originally lived in northeast India but moved to the Shan area of Burma near China.

LIFESTREAM SLATES CONCERT SUNDAY

A concert of Christian music will be presented by Lifestream in Victoria's McPherson Playhouse Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The Canadian group Freeway will join American performers Mike Johnson, Danny Taylor and Bill Vegh in the free concert open to the public.

Another Sunday event will be the week's open-air gospel service in Beacon Hill Park's Cameron Bandshell.

The Victoria Camp of the Gideons International in Canada — recently split into two groups —will conduct the service.

Princess Honored

Mrs. Amin a Miss

President Idi Amin's new wife, Sarah, has been nominated to be called Miss Africa. Secretary-General William Eteki Mboumoua of the Organization of African Unity made the suggestion Friday, the Uganda Broadcasting Corp. reports.

Liquor Ad, Cigarette Sale Curbs Proposed in U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP)—A federal plan for improving the health of the United States proposes restrictions on liquor advertising and on the sale of cigarettes with high tar and nicotine contents as a way to cut the amount of death and disease.

The staff proposal from the department of health, education and Welfare, (HEW), now being studied by outgoing secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, takes the concept of preventive medicine into new, controversial areas.

But, the HEW health experts said, factors such as diet, consumption of alcoholic beverages, smoking habits, environmental pollution and occupational hazards play as great a part in the current health of the nation as such traditional areas of medicine as the availability of doctors and hospitals.

"A broad-scale program of chronic disease prevention has to look at our behavior," said Dr. Theodore Cooper, HEW's assistant secretary for health, in an interview.

Cooper said any program to improve the nation's health, judged on the basis of an increased lifespan and cuts in the amount of disease, is "doomed to fail" unless the government moves into this new area of preventive medicine.

Among the suggested proposals for cutting the use of alcohol—all cetain to be fought in Congress by members of the alcoholic beverage industry—are decreasing the alcoholic content of some beverages; restricting liquor advertising; stopping companies from using alcoholic beverage advertisements as a tax deduction, and setting the tax of an alcoholic beverage according to its alcoholic contents.

The anti-smoking suggestions include Weinberger's proposal last week to Congress to ban the manufacture and sale of cigarettes with a high tar and nicotine content because they are "excessively hazardous."

The HEW plan also proposes an action involving the agriculture department—ending the federal price supports for tobacco farmers. Cooper said the federal goverment—which discourages the use of tobacco through HEW while encouraging farmers to plant it through agriculture department subsidies—must be dealt with.

"Prohibition is not what I'm talking about either in cigarettes or alcohol," said Cooper.

Cigarettes have been implicated strongly in a wide variety of diseases—including cancer and heart disease, the two biggest killers of Americans.

Smokey Won't Get Dream Home

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Smokey the bear won't be retiring to a dream home in New Mexico after all. The government can't afford it, so Smokey will have to spend his last years in a Washington zoo.

The forest service said Friday building costs for the planned retirement home have soared at least 50 per cent over estimates.

So instead of a quiet life in the state where Smokey was found 25 years ago clinging to a burning tree in a national forest, he and his mate — Goldie — will remain in the national zoo in Washington D.C.

After announcing earlier this year that the most famous bear in the U.S. would retire, the forest service promised to build him a grotto complete with a fenced-in area, wading pool, two dens and a concrete house in northern New Mexico.

Charter Rules Eased in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans will be able to take package air vacations after Sept. 13 for less or about the same price as they now pay for air transportation alone.

The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) on Friday approved onestop inclusive tour charters with rules far more liberal than present charter requirements.

The one-stop charters will provide air transportation from one city to another, hotels during the vacation, baggage handling and related ground transportation.

The new charters do have several restrictions. One-stop charter trips to places within the 50 states in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and the Caribbean must be at least four days long. The minimum length outside North America will be seven days.

The price will be based on each passenger's share of the cost of chartering the plane plus $15 for each night's stay for adults and $7.50 a night for children under 12 accompanied by an adult.

Passengers wiill be required to purchase their tickets in advance of departure and the tour operator and airline doing the chartering must file a list of passengers' names with the CAB at least 15 days before departure on North American charters and 30 days on all others.

The charters will be organized by independent tour operators and sold directly by them. There is no requirement that purchasers belong to any organization or social club.

Charter flights are much cheaper than scheduled flights because they operate only with full passenger loads while scheduled airline flights normally have only about 55 per cent of their seats filled.

The CAB also approved similar reduced fares for special events, such as the Super Bowl.

The CAB order was challenged immediately by Trans World Airlines. TWA asked a federal appeals court in New York to overturn the new rules, saying the CAB had overstepped its authority.

TWA's profits have fallen recently and the existing charter fares have received some of the blame.

WASHINGTON — President and Mrs. Ford will mark their first anniversary in the White House Saturday night with a private dinner for Vice President and Mrs. Rockefeller and some of the Ford and Rockefeller children.

Court Blasts FBI Man

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The U.S. sixth circuit court of appeals Friday unanimously ruled an FBI agent was "clearly unreasonable" in negotiating with the hijacker of a charter aircraft and turned the situation into a "shooting match which left three persons dead."

The court, in reversing the U.S. district court in Nashville, Tenn., said agent James O'Connor "failed to act in accordance with (FBI) procedures" in trying to coax a jijacker out of the plane.

The lower court had absolved O'Connor of negligence in a gunbattle with the hijacker in Jacksonville, Fla., who shot and killed his estranged wife, the pilot of the plane and himself.

The lower court has ruled against the widow of the pilot, Mrs. Brent Downs, who asked for $2.5 million in damages.

The plane was hijacked in Nashville and flown to Jacksonville before O'Connor began his efforts to free the hostages.

The appellate court said that "O'Connor failed to act in accordance with procedures intended to maximize hostage safety.

Major U.S. Steel Makers Call Off 9% Price Hike

WASHINGTON (WP) — The biggest U.S. steel maker said Friday that it would raise prices on its flat-rolled products Oct. 1, forcing two other major steel producers to call off larger price boosts they planned to put into effect Sunday.

United States Steel Corp. said it would raise prices Oct. 1, an average of 5.7 per cent on flat-rolled steel products, which are heavily used in making automobiles and appliances. The company also reduced prices immediately on products — such as concrete reinforcing bars, which are facing stiff competition from foreign steel.

Within hours of the U.S. Steel announcement, Armco Steel Corp. delayed "until further notice" the 9 per cent boost it had announced last Tuesday. Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. rescinded a similar increase it announced last Wednesday. Both increases were due to take effect Aug. 10.

Armco, the fifth largest steel producer, told reporters Tuesday that the company was losing $2 million a month making flat rolled products and that by raising prices an average of $26 a ton, it would be making only half of the cost increases it faced.

Last December, the steel industry raised prices on a wide variety of products but not flat-rolled items. Both Armco and Wheeling are heavy producers of flat-rolled steel. While these products accounted for 41 per cent of total industry production, they make up 60 per cent of Armco's output and 70 per cent of Wheeling-Pittsburgh's. Wheeling-Pittsburgh is the ninth-biggest steel company.

100,000 TOLL?

NEW YORK (UPI) — As many as 100,000 persons in New York could contract lung cancer if an aircraft carrying radioactive plutonium crashed at one of three area airports, a physicist says.

Dr. Marvin Resnikoff of the State University of New York prepared an affidavit presented Friday by the New York Public Interest Group, Inc., in a continuing fight to ban air shipment of nuclear materials in New York.

Slaying Evidence 'Poorly Handled'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A criminology expert has testified that evidence was poorly handled in the case of the white jailer Joan Little is accused of slaying.

Herbert MacDonnell, director of the Laboratory of Forensic Sciences at Corning, N.Y., also questioned Friday the quality of photographs of the scene at the Beaufort County jail in Washington, N.C.

Miss Little, 21, a black, is on trial for second-degree murder in the death of white jailer Clarence Alligood, 62. The prosecuion contends she killed him last Aug. 27 in an escape plot. She says she was defending herself from a sexual attack when she stabbed him with an ice pick.

Alligood was found in Miss Little's cell, nude from the waist down and with seminal fluid on his thigh. He was clutching the ice pick in his right hand.

MacDonnell said blood spots in the cell were "consistent with movement", but he didn't say it was proof of a struggle.

He also said that some of the blood stains apparently had been diluted with water and that a blood stain on Alligood's undershirt had been "wiped or swiped" across its outer surface.

The defence is expected to contend that Alligood or someone else attempted to wash off some of the blood caused by the 11 stab wounds.

MacDonnell also told the court that spots on a photographic print looked like blood and could be "misinterpreted".

That print had been provided by the State Bureau of Investigation to the defence under court order. But a print from the same negative introduced earlier as evidence by the prosecution didn't have the spots.

The witness said the spots probably were the result of poor photographic work rather than an attempt to tamper with evidence.

When asked about the crime scene, MacDonnell said: "What I see is not as complete as it could have been. It is not my idea of a well preserved crime scene, or well documented."

Weddings

McAllister — Ramsdale

On Saturday, June 14, 1975, in St. Luke's Anglican Church, Jacqueline Patricia Ramsdale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ramsdale, 308—1701 Cedar Hill Crossroads, exchanged wedding vows with Mr. Gregory Daniel McAllister, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McAllister, 1905 Richardson St. Archdeacon C. E. F. Wolff officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in her floor-length white gown that featured a long train, a lace bodice and long sheer puffed sleeves with matching lace cuffs, and shoulder-length scalloped veil. The bride also wore a pearl starburst brooch that belonged to her grandmother. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and baby's breath. Matron of Honour, Mrs. Linda Hunter and bridesmatron Mrs. Debbie Meiner chose identical coral colored gowns with empire waistlines, soft V-neck and short puffed sleeves. They wore matching white hats with coral ribbons and carried colonial bouquets of white chrysanthemums and coral carnations, bordered in lace. The mother of the bride chose a mauve floral crepe dress with white accessories. A light mauve corsage completed her ensemble. The groom's mother wore a full length light beige dress with sash tie and a peach colored corsage. Best man was Mr. Alan McAllister, brother of the groom, and ushers were Messrs. Ken Langdale and Ken Ramsdale.

Quenet — Schoderbeck

Rev. N. Archer officiated at a double-ring ceremony in Emmanuel Baptist Church on July 5th, 1975, when Marilyn Jean, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Schoderbeck, exchanged wedding vows with Dr. Robin Vincent Quenet, second son of Sir Vincent and Lady Quenet of Salisbury, Rhodesia.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Sylvia Schoderbeck, as maid of honour, with her cousin, Mrs. Diana Baker, and Miss Lynn LaFortune as bridesmaids. Mr. Paul Brett was best man, and the ushers were Messrs. Wayne Whitney and Douglas Linton. Mr. Reid Fischer was soloist.

Waller — Owen

The marriage took place in Victoria, B.C. on July 9, 1975, between Marilyn Joyce Owen, and Robert James Waller.

Mannering — Kompagne

Phillip and Edith Mannering are very happy to announce their marriage which took place in Vancouver, B.C. on August 5, 1975. They wish to express their love to their parents, Mrs. G. A Talbot of Victoria, B.C., and Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Versteegh of The Hague, Netherlands.

Craig — Slater

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony M. Slater of North Saanich and Victoria, are pleased to announce the marriage of their daughter Deborah Anne, to Mr. Hugh Craig of Vancouver.

The wedding took place on June 28th, 1975, at the Deep Cove Chalet, with Rev. John Wood of Brentwood officiating.

LAST WEEK
• • •
WE HAD A FIRE! It was a disaster! We lost our stock — we lost our warehouse — but we didn't lose our faith in the Victoria market . . . WE'RE HERE TO STAY.

THIS WEEK
• • •
We're back in business: Daily, truckloads of appliances and carpets are rolling in fresh from factory suppliers, and from McDonald's Warehouses in Vancouver, New Westminster, Calgary, and Edmonton.

THANK YOU VICTORIA . . .
We've only been in business here for two months, but that's long enough to know we're welcome. Hundreds of homes in the Greater Victoria Area are now using appliances and carpet from McDonald's Supply. Perhaps that's because McDonald is the largest distributor to builders in Western Canada . . . and we sell at builders' prices.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS . . .
Not to worry! We are holding $200,000 worth of orders to be filled in August and September. We may be a little late — but McDonald's will deliver the goods.

8 CARD OF THANKS

The gratitude in our hearts can never be fully expressed, but we want our friends, relatives and neighbours to know how much their kind words and expressions of sympathy have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of my husband our father and grandfather. Special thanks to the Rev. H. W. Kerley, Dr. N. S. Lockyer, — Mrs. D. J. Sullivan, Dr. W. J. Bell and dear friend Mrs. Colleen Hubbard.

We desire to thank our friends for their kindness, words of sympathy and many cards, in our late bereavement. — James Clayton and family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BENNETT—Mrs. Anne Bennett (nee Kilroe) who passed away August 9, 1973.
Two were born a world apart
They were meant to meet and share but one heart.

BENNETT—Mrs. Anne T. Bennett who passed away August 9, 1973.
And we will have peace
Children and live forever.
Always loved and missed by Laureen, Jim, Brent, Teri, Derin and Cory.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

Breathtaking
In Both Setting and Design

An extraordinary home sited on over 3 acres of Arbutus and Evergreens. Complete seclusion with mountain and valley views, yet only 20 minutes from downtown. The home has all the features one would expect of an architecturally designed home in this setting, and reflects the pride and skill of the builder. 2200 square feet on two floors: 3 bedrooms, family room with fireplace and sauna, 3½ baths, large kitchen with utility room. The interior design is beautifully accented by vaulted cedar ceilings, skylights and imaginative indirect lighting. A most unusual home which you should see. You can still choose your own carpeting and interior colouring. Well priced at $109,500. MLS 13451.

34.22 AC — 2000 SQ. FT. HOME
MILL BAY NORTH

This land is beautiful. Approx. 10 acres in meadow including a natural pond. The land rolls ever so gently; the home stands in approx. an acre cleared, except for some fine specimen cedar and arbutus for effective landscaping, a wood screen beyond. Only 2 years old with exterior walls of natural finish cedar. Shake roof and stone chimney, the home blends happily with the surroundings. The living room, 20x24 has vaulted ceiling, gable window plus expansive windows that bring outdoors in. A 15-ft. width of floor to ceiling stone includes a large heatilator fireplace. There's quality carpeting and drapes, also in the dining room, and the den, which has its own stone fireplace and built-in book shelves. There's a pretty powder room, well planned spacious kitchen and very large utility workroom. The bedroom wing has master with built-in wardrobe wall and 3 piece ensuite, two more spacious bedrooms and an extra large bathroom. Lighting include feature lighting in the living room and double flood lighting on all outside walls. The enormous windows keep the inside bright bringing outdoors into each room yet there is true privacy. Over three quarters perimeter is fenced with some cross fencing in the meadows. There are winding riding and walking trails through the wooded portion of the property. A 30x14 building with big fenced enclosure could be for horse or other animals. Truly beautiful and secluded yet convenient to town. Asking $157,000. Owner has left the island must sell. For appointments call

M-B 'Using Fear Tactics' To Obtain Tsitika Timber

An executive of the B.C. Wildlife Federation today accused MacMillan Bloedel of using tactics of "fear and current unemployment to obtain additional timber in the Tsitika-Schoen region of Vancouver Island.

Ed Mankelow, past president of BCWF, was referring to an M-B statement that the provincial government decision to continue a moratorium over half of the Tsitika-Schoen watersheds "will cost jobs."

The M-B statement came after Resources Minister Robert Williams announced the release of 168,000 acres from the 310,000-acre wilderness on which a moratorium was imposed on logging and road buildings in February,, 1973.

Williams released the timber to ensure "that employment opportunities will be maintained" but the company now wants the remaining forest area released.

J. R. Forrest, M-B's group president of forestry and building materials, said the minister's decision is "going to create serious unemployment among our employees in the Sayward community and at converting plants elsewhere."

He said as it is "we have already been forced to lay off 31 people employed in road construction at our Eve River division."

Mankelow said statement by Forrest was "ridiculous."

"MacMillan and Bloedel operations are all shut down," he pointed out. "The loggers are out and none of their men are working. I resent this statement about 31 people being laid off."

Mankelow said if the company depends on the additional wilderness area to keep working in the Sayward district, it shows that the company's operations are poorly planned.

"But it is obvious that the company is just using tactics of fear to get at the timber," he said.

Victoria Sierra Club president Bruce Hardy said the company was using the Tsitaik-Schoen issue to detract people from the "real issue, which is better logging practices."

"The company enjoys too much power in this province," he added. "It thinks it can do what it wants. Other companies have shown a willingness to co-operate in resolving land use issues in B.C."

The Tsitika-Schoen is the last unlogged watershed on the east coast of Vancouver Island.

Williams placed a moratorium on the area to determine ways and means of logging the area without destroying other resources, such as fisheries, wildlife, water and recreation.

Studies are under way in the areas which is still under a moratrium.

MAGICIANS, VIKINGS OPEN WITH SHUTOUTS

Vancouver Magicians scored a 1-0 win over Mr. Sport Hotel of New Westminster while North Vancouver Roadhouse Vikings downed Abbotsford-Clearbrook 4-0.

In play today in the eight-team, double-loss tournament, Victoria Bate plays Port Alberni Molsons and New Westminster Royal Towers meet Nanaimo A and B.

The tournament concludes Sunday.

Grant for Centre

The provincial government has offered a $156,666 grant for construction of a senior citizens acitivity centre at the Juan de Fuca Recreation complex in Colwood.

This represents one-third of the proposed cost of the centre and money comes from the government's community recreational facilities fund.

As well, Langford Recreation Commission was given $4,483.33 to help in constructing ball diamonds, a tennis building, a playground, bleachers and fencing.

Jazz Group Here Sunday

The popular Seattle jazz group, Marbles, will be featured by Victoria Jazz Society at Harpo's Cabaret, Bastion Square, Sunday.

Plans for a sustained Sunday jazz club at the same location are well in hand. On Aug. 17 Victoria's Jerry Bryant Quartet will be presented. Thursday, Aug. 21 will mark the appearance of a top international band, the Oregan.

Doors of the licensed club open at 7 p.m. and the bands start playing at 8 p.m.

Girl, 15, 'Missing' For Week

Katherine Anne Jordan, 15, has now been missing from her home a week and may still be in the Victoria area in the company of another girl, her mother said today.

Mrs. Marilyn Jordan, Apt. 5, 220 Wilson, said her daughter had no money or identification when she went missing late last Saturday night. She asked that anyone with information about the girl's whereabouts contact city police.

Katherine is described as five feet, nine inches tall, about 135 pounds, and was last seen in blue jeans, a flowered blouse and pale blue jacket. Her hair is blonde and cut in a long shag.

Judge Rules FEA Lacks Authority

HOUSTON (AP) — United States District Court Judge John V. Singleton Jr. has ruled that the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) does not have authority to control rents Shell Oil Co. charges on its service station properties.

Shell filed a suit against the FEA last January, claiming a 1974 FEA order prevented the oil company from passing along cost increases to its station operators.

Heathers Recommended for Easy-to-Care-for Garden

GARDENING
jack beastall

This column has frequently advocated the use of heaths and heathers for an easy-to-care-for garden. We have gone as far as saying an entire city lot could well be planted with heathers and would be of interest every month of the year.

Such a statement is immediately challenged by readers who know only one or two varieties, so today we are breaking a long standing rule never to give lists of plant names.

Any plant list is out of date before it is in print. New varieties are added each year and older ones deleted. Rarely does one come across a grower having a complete stock to match a published list.

As far as I can ascertain, no grower has replaced our local Heather Gardens which closed several years ago, but the stock was distributed among other nurseries and some should still be available.

Home gardeners seriously interested in heaths and heathers (the genera Erica, Calluna, Daboecia) should be able to accumulate a good planting, but it may be necessary to search all nurseries on the Island and lower Mainland.

The method of planting is important to success. Unlike most ornamental plants, heathers ( a term embracing all kinds) need to be set deeply so that the lower parts of the branches are covered by soil, first, to protect them from frost damage, second, to encourage rooting along the buried parts of the stems. More heathers are lost through shallow planting than from any other cause.

The soil needs to be well prepared with quantities of compost and leafmould thoroughly mixed to hold moisture and give an open texture.

Until the plants have spread sufficiently to touch one another, a mulch of compost or leafmould is pushed under each plant, by hand, in the fall, working it well in among the branches.

This is done around the end of September to prevent frost from splitting the stems.

When the plants have grown sufficiently to cover the soil they give natural protection, and an occasional top dressing of compost and leafmould is all that is needed. Fertilizers are not used.

Some writers tell us winter flowering varieties need a near neutral soil, and summer bloomers an acid soil, but experience locally has shown that acid conditions are not so important as a loose humusy soil, and that both kinds can be grown side by side if the soil is well prepared and free of lime.

They should never be planted near concrete foundations or concrete sidewalks because of the free lime from the concrete, nor close to light colored walls which reflect heat and cause scorching of the foliage.

Heathers cannot be "divided" since all branches emanate from a short central stem to which the roots are attached. Propagation is from cuttings one to two inches long of new growths made after flowering or from August to October.

The cuttings (50 or more to a four-inch clay pot) are rooted in a 50-50 mixture of coarse sand and well wetted peat moss, with a little screened leafmould added. After rooting, pot separately in small pots or cans and grow on in a coldframe, repotting to quart size cans. When these cans are filled with roots the plants go to the permanent bed. The root system is extremely large for the size of the plant.

The Mediterranean, or Tree Heathers, growing to heights around 2 to 3 ft., are slightly tender for our occasional cold spells, the tall stems splitting in low temperatures. While they add height to a planting, they do need shelter in winter. If garden is exposed, height is better obtained with dwarf ornamental shrubs.

Unless this is done the flowered portion remain bare and new growth comes from the tips, making unsightly, straggly plants. Regular clipping results in tight bushy mounds, completely covered with bloom at flowering time.

JANUARY:
Darleyensis alba; white.
Springwood; white, semi-prostrate, spreading.
Springwood Pink; pink, similar habit.

Train to Make Kids Jump for Joy

A wonderful idea for anyone with kids and a garden tractor is these railroad cars, mostly just plywood boxes with wheels, but with a few simple trimmings and a gay paint job. They're transformed into a train that will make kids jump for joy.

You can build one or two cars in your spare time for a start this summer, then add more as you get around to it or as a special gift for birthdays. Every time you hitch another car to your train, you become a hero all over again.

To order the mini-train pattern No. 311, send $1 cheque or money order to: DECO-PLANS, c-o Victoria Times, P.O. Box 90, Boucherville, Quebec.

Canadian Indian Princess Finds Prejudice in Toronto

WILLIAMS LAKE, B.C. (CP) — Clara Anderson, a small-town girl, says she had to go to the big city of Toronto as Canadian Indian Princess to experience prejudice for the first time.

Born and raised on a ranch near this British Columbia interior community about 200 miles northeast of Vancouver, Miss Anderson, 22, said local residents have always treated her and her family with respect.

"I'd hear about prejudice but had never experienced it and when I did, it really stung," she said in an interview.

"Then I thought to myself, there are pople who've lived with this all their lives."

Her first experience with racism occurred as she was introduced as the Canadian Indian Princess to a Toronto night club audience in October, 1973, during the Miss Canada Pageant.

"We were all introduced individually and, as I walked up to be introduced, someone from the crowd said: "What's she doing here?'

"I couldn't wait to get out of there," said Miss Anderson, who has assumed the role of acting princess because this year's princess, Janet Jonathon of Toronto, was unable to travel west because of her studies.

Miss Anderson said she is asked some strange questions when she travels to rodeos, Indian war dance championships and other events—"Are you really a wild Indian?" or "How do you talk to an Indian?" or "Do you really shoot arrows and scalp people?"

She said she believes she is an ambassador of Indian people and always tries to show people that Indians are a loving people who live in harmony with nature.

"Kids watch too many cowboy and Indian shows on television and a lot of them are amazed when they see and talk to me to find I am different from what they see on TV."

During her reign as princess, Miss Anderson was told not to involve herself in politics. A problem she constantly faced was answering questions about Indian land claims.

"That was hard because people would ask me these questions and they wondered whether I had no opinion when I would not answer," Miss Anderson said.

But now that she has passed on her crown, Miss Anderson does not refrain from answering that question: "The Indians are only asking for what is theirs."

She said Indians have a communal philosophy of sharing their possessions, but white men are more individualistic and find sharing a difficult proposition.

She said she has met many Indians during her travels who were working hard to help themselves get ahead.

WORK FOR WEEK

August best month for zonal pelargonium cuttings to root (commonly called bedding geraniums) if good light and cool space available in winter — between 4 and 13 degs. Celsius is good.

Remove only yellowing leaves from tomatoes; but all flowers which have not formed fruits by this time must be removed. They have no chance of forming usable fruits. Remove also any new shoots appearing in axils of leaves and the new top shoots at ends of stems.

Plant out kale and savoy cabbages at once if not already done. Use lime dusting in each hole to prevent clubroot disease.

SOUND KILLED HOUSE PLANTS

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — If you love your houseplants, don't yell at them. They might cry, run dry and die.

They started by growing two plants under identical conditons except for sound exposure. One was subjected to 100 decibels of sound — about the amount a passing elevated train might make. That plant wilted and died within a week and a half.

In a second experiment, the class checked the rates of growth of 12 plants for 11 days, then exposed the plants to sound and found their growth rate fell by 47 per cent.

Research showed the plants were suffering from a severe water loss. They were, in fact, "crying" through their leaves.

Last Chance For Gati At Bandshell

Last appearance in Greater Victoria parks of the Summer Festival Orchestra conducted by Laszlo Gati, will take place Sunday at Beacon Hill's Cameron Bandshell at 2:30 p.m.

For the occasion Gati has brought together a distinguished array of guest artists. They include Canadian flutist Robert Aitken; violinist Ruggiero Ricci, cellist Mihaly Virizlay, soprano Ingrid Suderman and the fabled guitar duo of Ako Ito and Henri Dorigny.

An outstanding program of music has been arranged and under sponsorship of the City of Victoria, Recording Industries' Trust Fund and Victoria Musicians Association, it is one of the several free concerts provided in Victoria parks this summer.

Wife Ad Gets No Takers

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Science teacher Ron Gordon says he wants to find the "right girl to marry" but so far he's only received phone calls complimenting his courage.

Gordon, 29, a teacher at Woodside High School, paid $650 to place a letter in the Palo Alto Times outlining his requirements for a wife.

The woman he's looking for should be "gentle, warm, loving and happy and between 23 and 30 years old," said Gordon. The age was important because he'd like to have four or five children, he said.

It began: "Dear Mommy, I'm tired of being not born yet ..." and explained although Gordon knew many women previously ... "they weren't the right ones. He was waiting for girl like you."

Paying money for an ad "seemed like the right thing to do," said Gordon. He said that if the marriage lasted 50 years, it would cost only $13 for each year of wedded bliss.

Campers Alerted

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario health ministry is looking for about 200 persons who attended an area camp in July after a camper from Michigan was diagnosed as having typhoid, officials said Friday.

What's in a Name? Too Many Letters!

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Valentine Kekahiolanikapukanehunamo-Kiukak ula-lonolkaoulaulani Kanehailu went to court the other day and asked that he be allowed to change his name for reasons of "personal convenience."

He said the middle name took several seconds to pronounce, even longer to write and would not fit on official documents such as a college diploma, driver's licence and passport.

Ramsey District Judge David Marsden approved the change to Valentine Likolehau Neuhaus for the 27-year-old native of Hawaii who told the court his previous name translates:

"The Gates of Heaven are Reserved for This Sacred Person Who is Protected by the God of the Sea, Lono, to that Time of His Return to Heaven."

NEW YORK — The widows of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy won the right to exclusive exploitation of the names and faces of the late comedy team, a court victory that may be worth $1 million a year.

Federal Judge Charles Stewart held in an opinion made public Friday that the Hal Roach Studios contract for exclusive exploitation of the comedians had expired and that its copyrights of Laurel and Hardy movies was no substitute.

Instead, the court found in an injunction against Hal Roach Studios that the actors' right of publicity was a property rightfully descendable to their heirs. Hardy died in 1957 and Laurel in 1965.

HARDY LAUREL

DAVENPORT, Iowa — Two Davenport radio disc jockeys this week established what they believe is the world record for continuous tilt-a-whirl riding.

But since there is no official mark for enduring the amusement park ride, they can't be sure.

David Morgan and Steve McFarland, both 22, set out Thursday to establish a tilt-a-whirl riding record at the Mississippi Valley Fair here. McFarland stayed on the ride for four hours, but Morgan became sick after only half an hour.

Jim Bennett, one of the backers of the convention and secretary of the Britt Chamber of Commerce, said only about 10 to 20 "honest to goodness" hoboes will attend. But 20,000 spectators are expected.

LONDON — Nin-month-old Irina Chudnovskaya's arrival here from Leningrad is making history in British-Soviet relations.

She has a heart defect and is the first Soviet citizen to come to Britain under a medical exchange agreement signed in Moscow last February by British Prime Minsiter Harold Wilson and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

LOS ANGELES — Myrtle West, 47, was placed on 10 years probation Friday for running a "welfare fraud school" that taught tricks such as padding a family with other people's children.

Two women and a man, Mrs. West's students, received the same sentence. The four were ordered to repay $42,000 in fradulently obtained welfare funds.

STINGING COMEBACK TO NATURE'S CALL

Shortly after she slipped into a clump of bushes, the bees swooped down, and she left in such a hurry that she took many of them with her.

She had stings over much of her body, and Daniel Zurke of Detroit hurriedly ferried her the mile or so from the Lake Erie resort island to a Customs office near Amherstburg, Ont.

There, she declined the offer of a chair while she awaited transportation to a hospital in Windsor, 15 miles away.

She was released after being treated.

Battle Against Malaria Gains

WASHINGTON (WP) — The picture is clear through the microscope. A malaria-causing parasite slides up to a dish-shaped red blood cell, bumps against it — and is repelled. Something in that red blood cell has blocked the malaria invasion, stopping the disease in its tracks.

Scientists at the National Institutes of health said Thursday they believe they have identified a gene in red blood cells that allows them to block the spread of one of the commonest types of malaria and thus offers total protection against one form of a disease that kills one million people around the world a year.

This gene, known as the Duffy negative gene after the patient in which it was first discovered, is commonly found among residents of West Africa who are resistant to the Vivax form of malaria.

The scientists said the red blood cells containing the Duffy negative gene could be seen under a microscope blocking the malaria-causing parasites.

But other red blood cells, with Duffy positive genes, were invaded successfully by the malaria-causing parasites. Within two to four days one parasite inside the red cell had multiplied to 10, and they all burst out to invade other red blood cells.

"The complete invasion process is only possible with Duffy positive erythrocytes (red blood cells)," the researchers reported in the current issue of Science Magazine.

Although largely eradicated from North American and Western Europe, Malaria is still a scourge in the rest of the world. An estimated 523 million people — more than twice the population of the United States — are exposed to malaria in Central and south America, Asia, the South West Pacific and tropical Africa.

The disease strikes about 100 million people a year, and about 1 million die from it. A 20-year World Health Organization campaign to eradicate malaria was called a failure in a recent editorial in the British medical journal, Lancet.

The NIH discovery opens the possibility of new forms of treatment for malaria — including an anti-malarial vaccine, said Dr. Louis Miller of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, who headed the research team.

He said that he and Drs. Steven Mason and James Dvorak decided to find out how the malaria-causing parasite gets into the red cell, which is 10 times as large. Because of the differences in size, they felt there was no way the parasites could push their way in; there had to be a chemical reaction that opened the red cells for them.

The scientists went for help to the NIH Blood Bank, where Mary H. McGinniss and Ivan K. Rothman pulled out rare blood types — including the Duffy negative — in their collection.

After finding that the Duffy negative repelled a parasite that causes malaria in monkeys, Miller said he found that gene is common among groups of Africans and American blacks resistant to Vivax malaria.

He did not use Vivax parasites because scientists have been unable to grow them in a laboratory. But the NIH team said the results with the monkey malaria parasite along with the evidence that groups with the Duffy negative gene are resistant to Vivax malaria show that the Duffy negative genes provide the protection.

The NIH scientists are not sure, however, that the Duffy negative gene will provide protection against the other two common forms of malaria — falciparum, the greatest killer which is common in Asia, Africa, New Guinea and the Haiti, and malariae. The fourth form, ovale, is the least common.

NUNS AIM FOR POPE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The 750 Roman Catholic nuns meeting here this weekend want an equal partnership in the running of the church, including ordination of women and perhaps the eventual election of a woman pope.

The members of the National Assembly of Women Religious say they seek more control over their own lives so they can respond better to today's social issues.

"I am 'church' as much as any bishop," Sister Catherine Pinkerton, 53, said. "We want partnership in the church.

"The whole thrust of this organization is that women should be at the decision-making and policy-making levels in the church."

And she said this includes the possibility of a woman pope some day.

Strike Continues, Fishermen Decide

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The Fishermen's component of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union has for the second time rejected a "final offer" from British Columbia's major fish packers.

The vote against acceptance was 64.1 per cent.

Union president Homer Stevens said the strike that began July 25 will continue even though shoreworkers belonging to the union voted acceptance by 78 per cent and tendermen voted acceptance by 76 per cent Thursday.

The second vote for fishermen came after the union's joint union committee considered the results of the first vote.

Stevens said the UFAWU still was willing to return to the bargaining committee.

He said the vote Friday was not a vote of non-confidence in the union executive.

"The fishermen just don't think the association's proposal comes close to meeting their needs," said Stevens. "They don't like the minimum prices offered. They want the company to pay half of the Canada Pension Plan. They want 70 per cent of the medical and dental paid by the company.

"They are angry at the company's refusal to put more money in the United Fishermen's welfare fund. The whole matter of safety was completely rejected by the association. There was no agreement over a minimum price for salmon eggs.

Union fishermen will likely continue to sell their catches to the public as the strike goes on, a spokesman said today in Vancouver.

Nick Carr said it would be recommended that the fishermen go out to maintain the supply for sale.

Carr said UFAWU officials were meeting today for an all-day policy conference "to decide where we go from here."

In the first vote, result of which was announced Thursday night, 62 per cent of the fishermen voted for rejection. "Substantially fewer cast ballots in the first vote," the union spokesman said.

"A full mobilization to picket duties has been called for," the union spokesman said.

The Native Brotherhood of B.C., which represents most of the Indian commercial fishermen voted 92.2 per cent in favor of accepting the association's offer. The brotherhood, also involved in a jurisdictional dispute with the UFAWU, went on strike Aug. 4.

"We can't make them fish," said Jerry Spitz of the association. "Fishermen, unlike shoreworkers and tendermen, are covered by no labor legislation and are not even a trade union. They are independent contractors and if they decide not to sell their fish to us we can't do anything about it."

Ulster Rioting Flares

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Rioting flared in several Roman Catholic neighborhoods of Belfast and Londonderry today on the fourth anniversary of the start of internment — the British policy of detaining suspected extremists without trial.

Demonstrators battled British soldiers, threw bottles, stones and several blast bombs at them, then assaulted military reinforcements when they arrived.

A dead man with bullet wounds in the chest was dumped outside Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital and the army said soldiers found a badly-injured woman lying in a street where fighting had taken place.

Several organizations including the outlawed Irish Republican Army had called for pre-dawn street demonstrations to mark the day four years ago when British soldiers started arresting suspects under the internment policy.

Lebanese Villages Shelled

Times News Services

SIDON, Lebanon — Israeli gunboats appeared off southern Lebanon Friday night as Israeli artillery shelled three Lebanese villages close to the border, local residents said.

The Lebanese army fired flares in the Naqoura area when reports of the gunboats were received at about 9:30 p.m. local time, they said. Naqoura is on the Mediterranean coast on the border with Israel.

The villages of Yarin and Dhaira, near Tyre, and the village of Aitaroun, near Bint Jbeil, were the targets of intermittent artillery shelling but the villagers reported no casualties or damage.

Israeli flares also were fired in an area of two other villages in the Bint Jbeil district — Yaroun and Maroun Ar-Ras — which have been the targets of Israeli attacks in the past, the residents said.

Since an attack against Tyre and a neighboring refugee camp on Tuesday — when 18 persons, including four Lebanese army officers, were killed — Palestinian commandos have been on a state of alert, the Palestine news agency (WAFA) says.

Lebanese army advanced posts also were under alert, the local residents said.

There was no Israeli air activity late Friday evening and there was no official confirmation in Beirut of earlier reports that the Israelis were massing troops on the border.

Meanwhile on the diplomatic front, Israel has asked U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to postpone his forthcoming Middle East trip until it can respond to further clarifications of the latest Egyptian positions on an interim agreement in the Sinai.

Kissinger had reportedly suggested that he begin his next diplomatic shuttle in the third week of August, possibly Aug. 20, in the hope of concluding the long drawn-out negotiations on an interim agreement.

The Israelis say they feel that the gap between their position and the Egyptian one is still too wide and should be narrowed further before Kissinger makes the trip.

Opposition Swells For Portugal Junta

LISBON (AP) — An avalanche of civilian and military opposition bore down today on Premier Vasco Goncalves, threatening to smash his government and block Portugal's Communist course.

The Armed Forces Movement (AFM), leader of the leftist revolution and Goncalves's power base, cracked wide apart as moderate officers rushed to sign a document denouncing the premier's Communist-line policies a day after he formed a new cabinet.

President Francisco da Costa Gomes and internal security chief Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho, Goncalves's partners in the country's all-powerful junta, were moving toward the moderate camp, AFM leaders reported.

Portugal's two biggest parties, the Socialists and Popular Democrats, spokesmen for 64 per cent of the electorate, lined up behind the dissident officers.

The military's bloodless revolt encompassed the entire armed forces—from the navy, traditionally the most radical branch, to the air force, the most conservative.

Military sources said more than 400 officers have signed the dissident document, drawn up by front-line heroes of the revolution, within hours of its appearance Thursday night. It already had been signed by nine of the 30 members of the Revolutionary Council, top military body under the crumbling junta.

The political violence that has bloodied Portugal in recent days subsided as marines moved into northern town to disperse anti-communist mobs.

Officially, the junta denounced the document, calling it "pernicious and divisionist." But it threatened no punitive action.

The dissidents, however, said Carvalho and Costa Gomes are in their camp.

The navy chief of staff, Admiral Jose Pinheiro Azevedo, Goncalves's new navy minister, formally authorized the circulation of the document. Further proof of the unrest in the navy came with the resignations of 37 submarine officers, including four commanders, who accused the government of planting a Communist spy in their unit.

The Roman Catholic Church added to the pressure on Goncalves with a call for an antigovernment rally today in the northern city of Braga, hub of anti-radical demonstrations that have taken four lives this month.

INDIANS NO WORSE

MONTREAL (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand told a news conference at the American Bar Association (ABA) Friday that Canada's Indians are no more given to violence than other groups.

"There's no doubt a small number of very militant and violence-prone Indians in Canada, but I can say that about any group."

He would not comment on an RCMP report on 'Red Power'—made public earlier this week—which said the RCMP had reason to believe some Indian groups were importing arms into the contry.

Spain To Curb Violations

OTTAWA (CP) — Spanish authorities have agreed to try to curtail violations committed by their fishing fleet off Canada's east coast, it was announced Friday.

A statement from the external affairs department said officials of the Spanish and Canadian governments met here Wednesday and Thursday to work out fisheries problems.

Last July 23, Canada threatened to close its Atlantic ports to the Spanish fleet if "certain violations" of fishing regulations were not stopped.

The Spanish agreed to work with Canada, the statement said, to obtain "improved compliance" with regulations set by the International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries (ICNAF).

It was agreed that Spanish inspectors would work with Canadian inspectors in order to protect the "serious decline in fish stocks."

Canadian Autos Dumped?

Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—The U.S. Treasury department is initiating a formal investigation into charges that Canadian-made cars are being "dumped" on to the American market, although it has "substantial doubt" foreign imports are hurting the U.S. auto industry.

Assistant Treasury Secretary David Macdonald said the investigation is being launched because of complaints from a Pennsylvania congressman and the United Auto Workers union that foreign cars are being sold in the U.S. at prices below those charged in the countries where they are manufactured.

In addition to Canada, the treasury will investigate car imports from the United Kingdom, West Germany, France, Belgium, Italy, Sweden and Japan.

France Halts Arms Sale To S. Africa

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing said today that France will halt arms sales to white-ruled South Africa.

Sources close to the president said the arms embargo will be placed on weapons used by ground and air forces, but that naval armaments will not be included.

Giscard d'Estaing, flanked by President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire at a news conference ending a three-day visit, said France and Zaire condemned apartheid in South Africa in the same terms.

"On this condemnation, accompanied of course with an interruption of all arms deliveries to South Africa, as well as Namibia, our positions are totally alike," Giscard D'Estaing said.

France has been one of South Africa's principal arms suppliers, selling the South Africans jet aircraft, helicopters, submarines, missiles, and armored vehicles.

He Had 8 to 5 Job . . . Defrauding the UIC

WINNIPEG (CP) — Crawford Varnes, a former employee of the Unemployment Insurance Commission who defrauded the UIC of more than $62,000, was sentenced Friday to two years in prison, to be followed by three years on probation.

Varnes, 41, of Winnipeg, was arrested two months ago and pleaded guilty June 25 to 44 charges of fraud. Provincial Judge George Lockwood said in passing sentence that his prime consideration was to deter others from similar crimes.

Court was told Varnes, employed by the UIC for 10 years prior to his resignation, used 24 social insurance cards he obtained under phoney names and collected benefits in various towns.

Varnes told police in a statement he established bank accounts and post office box numbers in as many as 12 rural Manitoba communities, to disguise the over-all operation.

The applications for benefits were sent in by mail, and when the UIC made inquiries or asked for an interview, Varnes would send a letter terminating his claim, saying he had found a job.

Varnes got the social insurance cards simply by filling out the required forms he obtained at a post office. He mailed them to Ottawa without proof of identification, court was told.

Crown counsel George Dangerfield said Varnes launched his complicated scheme in late 1969 when he quit his job with the UIC at Yorkton, Sask. and moved back to Winnipeg.

Court was told that for the next five years, Varnes' wife saw him leave home each weekday at 8 a.m. and return at 5 p.m. and believed Varnes' story that he was working in public relations.

Varnes was caught after the UIC discovered two of his fictitious names were using the same post office box in portage La Prairie to receive benefits. The post office was staked out by RCMP.

Judge Lockwood said Varnes was able to support himself and his family comfortably for close to five years "without doing an honest day's work."

The judge said, "one would think it not beyond human ingenuity to devise a system of checks" to prevent such long-term abuses of the system. He said it was clear there should be tighter regulations on obtaining social insurance cards.

Sea Blast to Test Seismographs

Seismographs at scattered points in B.C. will record an undersea blast to be triggered in the deeps off northern Vancouver Island when sea conditions are right.

It will be one of the largest explosions—nearly three tons—of outdated munitions disposed of by the Canadian Forces diving and demolition unit of Pacific Maritime Command, and is being timed and placed to assist geophysicists in their study of earthquakes.

Dr. W. G. Milne, of the earth physics branch of the department of energy, mines and resources, said it will be the first time such an exercise has been done locally, but the method is used from time to time elsewhere such as off the British Isles.

Scientists will use the blast to calibrate detection instruments used in the study of earthquakes. Seismographs are located at Victoria, Port Alberni, Port Hardy, Queen Charlotte City, Fort St. John, Penticton and Haney.

The blast will be set off about 100 miles west of Cape Scott where the sea bed is more than 1,000 feet deep. Dr. Milne said it will be triggered at a precise depth of 500 feet in order to benefit as much as possible from absorption and reflection of the energy produced in the explosion.

It will take about one minute and five seconds for the shock wave to reach Victoria.

Juvenile Act Frustrates Court System

By HOI-YIN DER
Times Staff

There is little a judge can do with hard-core juvenile delinquents in B.C., and nobody really knows what to do about it, says Allison Brunet, member of Attorney-General Alex Macdonald's provincial action team.

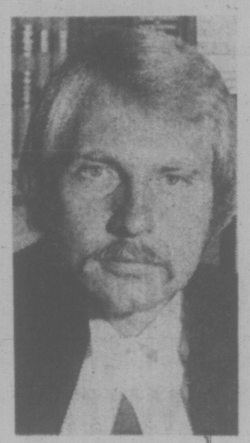
Macdonald recently formed the team to bring about the implementation of the Berger Commission recommendations on family courts and juvenile delinquency. He has also approved in principle the return of power to regional Crown prosecutors to transfer some juveniles to adult court and has promised "secure facilities" for some juvenile delinquents.

"But I certainly do not want anyone to think everything is going to happen overnight," Brunet said during an interview from Vancouver.

She added that many people are "neglecting the fact that all sorts of things are being and have been done in this area."

Yet many others said they find themselves continually frustrated in attempting to work within what one judge called the "strict confines" of the Juvenile Delinquents Act.

There are very few options open to a judge in the sentencing of juveniles. He can fine the child up to a maximum of $25, place him on probation or under the care of the superintendent of child welfare.



CAMPBELL
. . . broadens options

Family court judge Douglas Campbell said he would like to see the "spectrum of options broadened."

"The policy as it exists works well as a general policy, but it is not brought home to the specific child (the repeater) and therefore works to the detriment of that child," Campbell said.

The judge emphasized, however, that 75 per cent of juveniles who commit criminal offences are disposed of outside the court and rarely return on further offences.

But the return rate among the 25 per cent who make it to court is high, said family court prosecutor Trudi Brown.

"We watch them return time and time again," Brown said. "It's frustrating, but there's little we can do about it."

She said after a child realizes he can commit one or two criminal acts for which he receives virtually no punishment, he will continue committing such acts and make mockery of the system throughout.

Campbell agreed "it's all very frustrating . . . but we don't feel defeated. We in this business are pretty thick-skinned."

Brown said one juvenile, recently raised to adult court, had the "startling" record of 82 convictions of breaking and entering and theft related offences in juvenile court.

"I think 82 is the all-time record in this court, but I have about five kids reaching that point and I fear they may soon surpass it," said the prosecutor. "Only last week we had one 15-year-old boy charged in connection with 37 break-ins in the Greater Victoria area."

Macdonald's promise of containment-treatment centres for specifically this type of delinquent has raised much controversy. Some agree that this is a move in the positive direction, others disagree and still others are non-committed.

Judge Campbell would not take a stand on containment or non-containment but said "the announcement about secure facilities will certainly broaden the options open to a judge."

On the other hand, prosecutor Brown said the announcement "indicates the courts will at last be able to consider the protection of the public as opposed to the rehabilitation of the child who continues to commit crimes, simply refusing to participate in rehabilatative programs."

Saanich police chief Bob Peterson agreed.

"Repeaters are certainly a course of frustration to police and the courts, and in the case of the hardcore delinquent, we do require some sort of custodial facility."

Peterson added that he is "quite convinced street-level methods for dealing with first and second time offenders are achieving good results."

"I oppose incarceration of any sort," said Bonner, of the youth services branch of the department of Human Resources.

Jails, he said, are schools for crime.

"Attendance centres, group homes and counselling are much more effective . . . in the long run we may not have as many hardened criminals because the kids have been kept in the community and have learned to take some responsibility for themselves," Bonner said.

STANTON
. . . don't blame parents

But chief probation officer Edward Stanton said he feels "kids can also learn and do learn a great deal of crime on the streets."

Stanton said a major fault with probation and keeping the child on the street is the central premise that parents are incapable of counselling and that probation officers and social workers are the only qualified people.

"It is time society realized no parent has a degree for being a parent and you cannot blame them for their children's delinquencies," Stanton said. "Many children in fact put parents through the gates of hell."

He said treatment based on the tenet parents are constantly in the wrong will only perpetuate further juvenile delinquency.

Brunet, however, said that adults as a group are to blame.

"Kids do accept adults as learning models and until adults begin to set better examples, juvenile delinquency will continue," she said.

"And prisons are not the answer . . . we haven't done a whole lot for adults in jail so what makes us think we will be able to accomplish anything by incarcerating juveniles."

Projects Viewed By Award Jury

Two Greater Victoria projects were viewed by a five-person jury on Friday as part of a cross-Canada tour to select winners of the national Vincent Massey Awards.

The two local projects are the lower causeway promenade in the Inner Harbor and the Gorge Road improvement site.

The awards, presented every other year, are provided jointly by the Vincent massey Foundation, the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the Canada Council.

This year's awards will be for "excellence in the urban environment". They will be presented by Governor-General Jules Leger in Ottawa in October.

Allan O'Brien, professor of political science at the University of London in Ontario and a former mayor of Halifax, N.S. heads the five-person jury.

Also on they jury are Clifford Wyens, a Regina architect; June Rowlands, who will be a Liberal candidate in the next Ontario election; Jean-Claud Marsan, director of the University of Montreal's faculty of architecture, and Shirley Chan, a community affairs consultant in Vancouver and Ottawa.

The jury, which started its tour in Halifax on Aug. 1 will judge 31 projects across the country.

Six of these are in Vancouver. They are Gastown, Arbutus Village, a housing and commercial development; The De Cosmos cooperative housing complex; Cloverdale, an urban renewal project in Surrey; Mount Pleasant park, which is a Vancouver mini park, and Strathcona.

Miss Chan will exclude herself from the jury when it judges the Strathcona project today because she was one of those that initiated the program.

Strathcona is a residential community in downtown Vancouver, consisting of old houses of between 50 and 70 years of age that have been renovated. Most of the occupants are Chinese.

Vandals Hit St. Alban's

The St. Alban's Anglican Church at Ryan and Belmont was vandalized early Thursday and more than $600 worth of religious items stolen, Victoria police reported Friday.

Police said the stolen items included three frontal altar cloths, two brass candlesticks, two vases, a cope, a silver baptismal bowl, a silver chalice, a silver plate, two cruets, a silver tray, an alms dish, as well as ministerial clothing, a bible and a church chequebook.

Two hours after the theft was discovered on Friday, a 26-year-old Cowichan man was arrested attempting to cash one of the cheques at a Yates Street store.

Police said the man was wearing some of the ministerial clothing and was carrying the Bible. He said he found them near the church.

He was charged with attempting to obtain goods by false pretence and obtaining a meal by fraud.

Hospital Beehive: Who's on Guard?

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Do patients in hospital get the care they should? Are their problems diagnosed accurately, treated consistently? Are all those operations necessary? Is anybody watching?

Royal Jubilee Hospital has just been granted accreditation for another three years, meaning an outside inspection team has found the hospital meeting standards of the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation.

Without accreditatin, a hospital is in deep trouble. So are its patients.

Among comments in Jubilee's accreditation report, prepared by a doctor from Toronto: "the medical staff is commended on the excellence of the medical review procedures currently being undertaken."

It's a pat on the back for a watchdog system Jubilee introduced 18 months ago which uses six rotating teams of doctor volunteers, a data analyst and a computer to monitor quality of patient care and the efficient use of just about everything in the hospital.

A hospital is like a beehive—patients, doctors, paramedics constantly flow in and out and a bewildering variety of examinations, tests, operations and treatment go on inside. Jubilee admits 24,000 patients a year. Is there any way to keep track of quality?

Vital to the Jubilee system is a computer service based in Ann Arbor, Mich., for hospitals throughout North America. What that service does is gobble up a constant flow of information from patients' charts and spew out details which show how each hospital compares with national and even international averages.

If, for example, diabetics treated at Jubilee, are getting some test fewer times or staying longer or in any way deviating from the experience at 200 other Canadian hospitals, the computer sheets show it. It's like a flashing light, telling the hospital administration and doctors to take a closer look.

Dr. Ray LeHuquet, medical director, said Friday that the hospital's medical staff, meaning the 150 or so doctors who have admitting privileges at the hospital, share the task of reviewing abnormal situations uncovered by the computer.

Divisions of medicine, surgery, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, general practice and psychiatry each have a review team of four to six doctors who serve for a year at a time.

They meet at least monthly and among their duties, closely examine the history of every death in the hospital, review the work of all new doctors for a year as well as cases of any doctor whose work they feel needs watching. The team can call a doctor in to explain any practice they think is questionable. But any disciplining is done by the medical staff executive.

The review teams are also drafting standards for diagnosing and treating particular diseases. What tests, for example, should be a part of tracking diabetes? What steps in treatment should routinely follow?

After these standards have been thrashed over and accepted at medical staff meetings, they serve as a yardstick against which care provided in any case can be measured.

The teams also monitor hospital services and how they were used. Was the admission of that patient necessary? Why the delay in getting x-rays or other tests done? Were there too many tests?

Le Huquet said one objective of the system is educating doctors who need help, not punishing them. It's a system devised by the doctors themselves and it's working well, he said, because they are enthusiastic about it.

Hearing 12 Years After Murder

A special witness hearing will be held in Victoria juvenile court next week for a 28-year-old man who has been in Essondale mental hospital since 1963 following the shooting death of a Saanich couple.

The man was committed to mental hospital by provincial cabinet order March 19, 1963 about five weeks after police discovered the bodies of George Bickford, 39 and his wife Helen, 43, shot to death in their home at 3625 Melcroft.

The man was 16 at the time and thus was charged with "a delinquency, to wit, murder." Since the charge is still in existence, the man is being returned to juvenile court.

The hearing is required under a 1972 provincial government policy which calls for infrequent hearings for those held in custody in mental hospitals.

The Bickfords were found dead Feb. 13 and police believed they had been killed two days earlier. Bickford had been shot once in the right eye with a .22 calibre rifle; Mrs. Bickford had been shot four times in the face.

On April 19 a coroner's jury named the man as the killer. During the inquest a Saanich police officer read from what he described as a confession which gave a motive and full details of the shooting.

POLICE SEEK SILVER OWNER

Victoria police are attempting to trace the owner of 95 pieces of silver plate cutlery found in a brown paper bag in Beacon Hill Park this morning.

Police said Donald Skuse of 978 Heywood was walking in the park when he spotted the bag partially hidden among rocks and brush near a playing field.

The cutlery is of two Community plate patterns and includes an antique souvenir silver spoon from Boise City, Idaho, dated 1892.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you give me information on the military march Colonel Bogey which was composed in 1917. Did a British composer write it for an American and is this march now known as the "Bridge of Kwai" and claimed to be by a U.S. citizen :P.W.T.

A. Colonel Bogey was composed by Kenneth Alford, which was a pseudonym used by British Major Charles Ricketts who was at the time, director of the band of the Royal Marines at Plymouth, England. For the film Bridge on the River Kwai, comtemporary British composer Malcolm Arnold, in writing the film score, did a setting of the harmonies of Colonel Bogey. However, due to copyright the melody was not set for any instrument but only whistled by the marching men.

Add Drivers' Adeptness to Victoria's Virtues

Now perhaps, Jack willing, we might be permitted to tack on one more virtue that helps make this beautiful Island city so unique.

That, of course, is driving, or rather the courtesy and adeptness with which, in comparison with many other cities, Victorians handle their vehicles.

Like Jack, I too have lived in several of the world's big cities, in London, in Sydney, in the Iranian capital of Tehran, and in Vancouver for a couple of years before making that big decision and setting sail across the Strait.

I have visited, too, many other places like Singapore, Manila, Bangkok and Hong Kong and often found the locals, just like the Tehranis, regarded cars as kind of fun things to tear around wildly in; and signs and traffic lights as jokes.

These, as I said, are big cities. But I have seen many cities of comparable size with Victoria, like Wellington and Christchurch in New Zealand, where the driving is not as orderly and safe as it is here.

I would never have dreamed of buying a bicycle while in Vancouver. Yet I have pedalled with gay abandon since being on the Island and so far, touch wood, have suffered no more than a few scratches when knocked off my bike by a seven-year-old, whose machine had high-rise handlebars and a banana seat.

This too, then, is one of the virtues of paradise. And as an added bonus we hear that we are less likely to be creamed by a runaway postal van that our compatriots across the water. And that Greater Victoria's postal van drivers are less likely to be killed or maimed while bringing all those letters you've been waiting for.

It seems like the other drivers over here, Victoria's postal people handle their vans in a better and more moderate way than they do over on the Lower Mainland.

Right now, a special nine-member inquiry committee is conducting an investigation — demanded by the Vancouver local of the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada — into the safety of the vans used across the country following the deaths of three drivers in three weeks.

In fact, Corporal Gordon Corsan of the B.C. Police College's driver training section and Stuart Richardson of the B.C. Safety Council's professional drivers' school spent Thursday weaving in and out and driving round and round testing the postal vans out at the old airport site at Boundary Bay.

One or two interesting things turned up.

Driver Corsan, after making more than 10 test runs, described what it's like handling a postal van, rather poetically when he said:

"You get the feeling while driving that you are sitting alone on a stool in a large auditorium and there is an earthquake. In other words you don't know which way the vehicle is going when it is pushed beyond its capabilities."

But that is only one remark and by no means conclusive.

Inquiry board chairman Joe Farley admits it is too early to tell whether it was the drivers or the vans that were the major contributors to the fatal accidents. And he estimates it will be some time before a decision is brought down, a decision that could affect the whole postal delivery system across the country.

One driver was killed while attempting to get back in his runaway van and the other two died after being thrown out when their vans were struck on the side and flipped over. There were two other recent accidents also involving postal vans but the drivers weren't hurt.

One theory is that it's not the vans at all, as there were three different types involved in the three fatal accidents, but the lack of caution by young relief drivers in Vancouver that is to blame.

In Victoria, there are far fewer young, inexperienced drivers in the postal service and there has not been one serious accident since the vans were introduced into service over here in 1961. There are now about 100 vehicles on the roads of Greater Victoria.

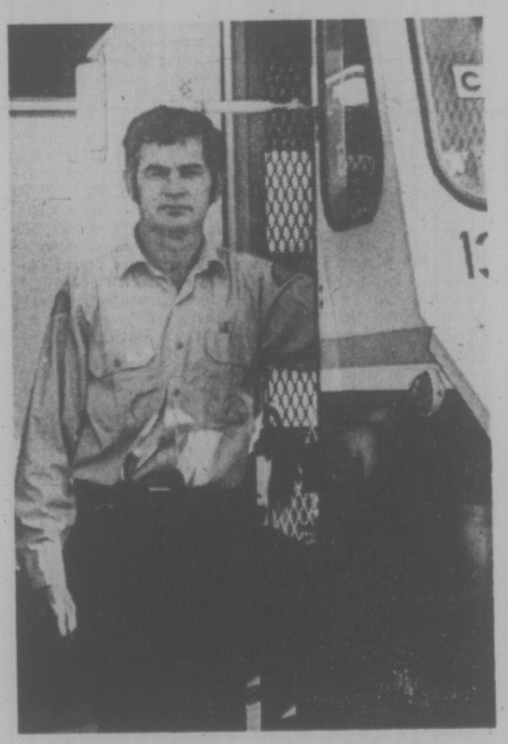
I talked to Buz Sawyer, the Post Office's public affairs officer for Vancouver Island. He was on holiday but still took time for a chat.

"All the vans are equipped with sliding doors and some have seat belts," Buz said. "The drivers are told to close the doors and the ones that have seat belts are told to put them on. If a driver has a short run, there is a tendency to leave the door open, but most drivers here are careful and shut the door."

President Bill Steele of the LCUC's Local 11 was on holiday, too, but at Postal Station D out on the old Island Highway I found Local secretary Ches Spencer, who said the union here had experienced no problems with the vans.

"You've got to drive them carefully, of course," Ches said before heading off on a mail run. "You can't corner easily with them like you're driving a sports car.

"I'm very pleased with our drivers over here, they're very safety conscious," Spencer added. "It's possible there's a problem in Vancouver with inexperienced drivers.



Spencer . . . not like driving sports car

"Vancouver had a staff turnover of more than 60 per cent last year, which was the highest in Canada.

"The staff is much more stable over here and if you looked at the seniority lists you'd find that most of the drivers have been at it eight or nine years.

"There's no substitute for experience when it comes to driving," said Ches kind of wisely. "Take a look at the Indianapolis 500 and you'll see most of the drivers are 40 or over."

Police to Vote On New Offer

Victoria city policemen will vote Tuesday on a new contract offer from the police board which has been recommended for acceptance by the union's negotiating committee.

Details of the new offer made at a negotiation meeting Friday have not been released, but it is believed the contract would provide wages similar to, if not slightly higher than, salaries provided in the recent Saanich police contract.

A Saanich first-class constable, the key classification, now earns $16,200 a year.

Victoria police had originally asked for parity with policemen on the Lower Mainalnd where a first-class constable earns $16,512 a year.

Iran Jails Greedy Millionaires in Inflation War

By ANDREW BOROWIEC
Washington Post

TEHRAN — After 18 months of high spending thanks to the oil-income bonanza, Iran is reacting to the realization that its economy is under severe strain and that the oil funds are not limitless after all.

Inflation, estimated at between 15 and 25 per cent annually, is just one of the problems after the period of massive loans abroad and multi-million-dollar contracts. To counteract the inflation, the government is closing shops, shutting down profiteers and even jailing millionaire violators.

In the past year, oil production has dropped 22 per cent. If the trend continued — even allowing for an expected 15 per cent rise in the price of oil this fall — Iran may fall some $4 billion short of revenue at the end of the year.

(Financial sources in London said Iran was seeking at least $620 million there to carry out committed projects, according to Agency France-Presse.)

Apparently the government has decided that inflation is the easiest problem to attack and its response has been spectacular. Within a week recently, more than 500 shops were closed, some 8,000merchants charged with profiteering and price violations and six millionaires jailed.

Habib Elghanian, a prominent Tehran plastic industrialist, was arrested July 27 on charges of overpricing his products. Six days later, Mayor Mohamed Mani of Isfahan and Beza Najsafi, director of the Department of Industry and Mines, were sentenced to 18 months' detention for ordering the brick factory they jointly own to sell above officially fixed prices.

During the week of the crackdown, prices of 638 domestic products plunged 5 to 57 per cent. The government is preparing a list of another 1,000 products for price slashes.

If these strong measures fail to bring down the rate of inflation by mid-August, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi has threatened those arrested with military tribunals.

The shah has staked his prestige on bringing down prices particularly of food and other items subsidized by the government.

Although part of the inflation is blamed on massive 40 per cent increases in the prices of imports, much of it is due to profiteering by local merchants.

The next target of the government are Tehran's staggering rents. Foreigners are often asked to pay the equivalent of $1,500 per month for a modest house. They have been promised legal assistance to fight greedy landlords.

Rents are hitting Iranians as hard as they have hit the growing foreign colony.

The more sober internal assessment of Iran's economic realities is accompanied by considerable wavering of foreign confidence in Iran's economic future and a drop in joint deals with foreign firms.

Iran and West Germany did sign a $5.5 billion protocol covering a host of joint ventures. But the bulk of the projects are yet to be worked out in detail.

On paper, Iran has committed some $45 billion in joint development ventures with 35 nations, including $15 billion with the United States. Some $10 billion are earmarked for grants and loans to other developing nations — and here serious cuts are in the offing. Already a number of countries have been warned not to expect much largess from Tehran.

The shah has not, however, indicated any cutback in military spending. It has risen 44 per cent in the last year, to nearly $8 billion — almost half of the $20 billion earned from oil. Iran reportedly ordered $3.3 billion in U.S. arms last year, almost half of U.S. weapons sales abroad.

Negotiations for half a dozen joint ventures between American and Iranian firms have been suspended and the flow of American businessmen to Tehran has subsided in recent weeks.

The opportunities are still here, but voices of caution have had their effect. Iran no longer looms to American business as a land of unlimited opportunity.

Lucrative contracts are increasingly hard to get, the competition is stiff and local red tape harder to cut.

The spectacular rise in oil prices since 1973 has created immense opportunities for Iran and led to the doubling of the expenditure in the current five-year plan to $69 billion.

But also in the past year, imports grew from $6 billion to $11.8 billion. Almost 60 per cent of the increase of money supply took place in the first quarter of the current year, creating serious inflationary pressures.

Earlier this year, the International Monetary Fund warned Iran that a "reduction in the planned level of the government's net domestic expenditure" was essential.

The official aim is to economize through greater efficiency rather than eliminate crucial development projects. But despite official assurances, some projects are being shelved.

Adding to the confused economic picture are transport bottlenecks and a dramatic shortage of manpower. It is estimated that to fulfill the objectives of the five-year plan running into 1978, some 700,000 skilled jobs will have to be filled, many from abroad.

Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida pledged recently that the development plan will not be slowed down. But at the same time he said that priorities are being revised. Government agencies have been orderd to trim their budgets by 20 per cent in some cases and a freeze on hiring of nonessential personnel has been announced.

Foreign firms eyeing Iran's investment possibilities are also concerned by the recent series of restraining measures. One of them is the public ownership law, requiring all major companies to sell 49 per cent of their shares to the public by 1978. As a start, 106 companies have been ordered to go public by next March. They include a dozen ventures with American participation.

Business euphoria was also hit by a number of more cautious appraisals of Iran's future than the optimistic ones which appeared with such profusion earlier this year.

Premier Cablevision Ltd. reports profit declined 12.8 per cent to a total of $1,936,000 in the six months ended May 31 from $2,221,000 in the same period last year.

Of the $285,000 decline, $170,000 was for the special 10-per-cent income tax surtax that ended May 31.

Sydney Welsh, chairman of the Vancouver-based company, said that while basic revenues from Canadian operations remained steady, subscriber growth is moderate due to the continued slump in housing starts.

He said inflatin and high labor costs further contribute to a reduction in earnings. For similar reasons the company is still showing a net loss in its Welsh communicaions division.

The Irish subsidiaries have felt the effects of the European economic downturn and resulting unemployment, Welsh's report said.

Although the capital building program and subscriber sales continue, they have not yet reached the break-even point, and an operating profit is not anticipated for at least another 12 months under present economic conditons, it said.

SECOND MORTGAGE

If you have your mind set on the purchase of real estate but do not have enough cash to meet the full price and down payment on the first mortgage, there is a solution. Second mortgages are also available and nothing to be afraid of. The owner may agree to take your promissory note and mortgage for the balance. This mortgage is usually for a smaller amount, and a shorter term than the conventional mortgage.

But no matter what kind of mortgage you arrange, be very clear about its terms and conditions. Many mortgages contain prepayment penalties, which means that if you decide to pay off the mortgage in advance, you have to pay an extra charge. There will also be clauses protecting the lender from your damaging the property or tearing in down. So it's important to read the fine print and understand what it means.

Your Realtor is familiar with these many clauses and can be helpful in assisting you to understand them.

HIGH QUADRA — FAMILY LIVING

This 4 bedroom, full basement family home has just been considerably updated — is presently vacant and available for immediate occupancy. Consider these features: large living room with fireplace, guest size dining room, family kitchen with fridge included. Heating is oil fired hot water — carpeting wall-to-wall and lino in kitchen and bathroom. Location is high with some city view. Handy to all conveniences — the lot abounds in plants, shrubs and is oak treed. The rear yard is quite secluded. Believe me, an older updated home in a choice mature area has much more to offer by way of amenities than something brand spanking new in a subdivision that was once a pasture! Consider this new listing at a reasonable asking price of $50,900. This won't last, so hurry!

For appointment to view anytime just call Henderson Realty Ltd., 1010 Blanshard St. Phone 385-9741, ask for Terry, residence 598-1544.

A Do-It-Yourself Triumph

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

It began three years ago when Bob Saunders started looking for a place where his youngsters could play lacrosse. It ended with a major sports facility at Centennial Park in Langford and the resurrection of the area's recreation association.

In the process, Saunders and his neighbors discovered how much you can save by doing it yourself. In their case, it amounts to approximately $70,000 worth of facilities for $12,000.

The secret lies in getting the materials at little or not cost and involving businesses, schools, service clubs and individuals with donations of cash and free labor.

Langford isn't the only area to use this formula to improve recreational facilities, but few neighborhoods have done it on a larger scale.

Saunders is the father of two boys and three girls, all of whom play lacrose. When he couldn't find a lacrosse box in his neighborhood, he went to Laurie Harrison, now president of the revived Langford Recreation Association, with the idea of building one.

Harrison felt the recreation group could handle the job, but a letter had gone to the regional board suggesting the association pack it in. Harrison and Saunders revived it and set out to build the lacrosse box.

The site was a 7.8-acre class "C" provincial park at Carlow and Goldstream Avenue, but a lot of work was needed.

Saunders, his wife, Norma, Harrison, Marvin Copp, Art Muralt and Jim McNulty formed the original group to improve the facilities. Muralt surveyed the field and Copp wore out a bulldozer he owned levelling the area.

Money and materials were needed and that's where Eric Butler of Butler Brothers in Sooke came into the picture. He extended credit for $5,000 worth of building materials.

Next came a bank loan for $7,500.

The group paid off Butler and the bank last year when a $7,000 grant came through from the provincial government's $10 million recreation fund. A kayak raffle and assorted other fund-rasing projects helped retire the debt.

Adults and youngsters served on a volunteer labor gang that Harrison estimates logged 160 hours a week for about a year on the lacrosse box, bleachers, concession stand, dressing rooms and washroom facilities.

Area service clubs have also played a vital role in maintaining and adding facilities in the park. The Lions put up a tennis shelter and are installing playground equipment; the Kinsmen look after a community hall on the property; the Kiwanis built lacrosse bleachers and the Optimists and Canadian Legion have donated cash.

"Without the volunteer labor and cash donations from these service clubs, we wouldn't be where we are now," Harrison admitted.

Anotehr individual who has made a large contribution in time and energy is Curtis McCulloch, who has taken a leading part in developing tennis facilities and washrooms.

Work is under way on a second tennis court and three softball diamonds with nearly 35,000 yards of fill going into their construction.

Future plans call for the installation of lights at the lacrosse box and, possibly, the construction of a lawn bowling green and other facilities for senior citizens.

Hundreds of area residents use the park, including Saunders' five youngsters.

Last weekend was especially gratifying when Saunders 11-year-old daughter Ruth a bantam lacrosse player who got her start in the new Langford box, became the first girl selected to the B.C. Lacrosse Association minor playoff tournament all-star team in New Westminster. A centre with 100F bantam girls in Langford, Ruth was picked up along with team-mate Shelley Huget to play for Esquimalt Bantam girls, who finished second in their division of the playoffs.

One of the biggest dividends of all, however, came from having the youngsters build and maintain the new facilities.

"We had a lot more damage done in the park before the improvements were made than we do now," Saunders noted. "The kids do a lot of their own policing."

Eagle Delays Action

VANCOUVER (CP) — As if British Columbia Lions haven't enough problems, they've got to go into Regina Sunday and take on Saskatchewan Roughriders, the leading team in the Western Football Conference.

Lions are winless in three starts this season and riddled with injuries to key personnel. Roughriders have won the three games they've played.

Lions' coach Eagle Keys counted on taking as much time as possible before deciding his lineup for Sunday's contest. Those injuries aren't making his decision easy.

Quarterback Don Moorhead has a muscle injury in his left shoulder, middle linebacker Ray Nettles has a bruised hip, defensive back Rocky Long has a bruised thigh, receivers Ross Clarkson and Slade Willis have shoulder injuries and defensive back Joe Fourqurean has a bruised knee.

Keys said linebacker Dan McDonough and defensive tackle Don Wunderly are ready to come off the 21-day injured lsit. Both were forced to the sidelines by ankle injuries.

However, to get them into the lineup, Keys will have to cut someone or place somebody on the injured list. That's another decision he was in no hurry to make, preferring to wait until Lions practiced this morning prior to the flight to Regina.

"They (Stampeders) beat us physically," Keys said. "I didn't think they could do that but they did."

One thing Keys doesn't want to have happen is 'Riders getting into an early lead. Calgary scored 10 points Tuesay before the Lions' offence got onto the field and couldn't get the points back.

"Football's a game of momentum," Keys said. "When you get out in front like that you just seem to hit harder and do a lot more things right."

Arizona Pro Out in Front

REGINA (CP) — A 51-year-old Arizonian competing in his first professional golf tournament this year emerged as the first round leader in the Saskatchewan Open Friday with a five under par 66.

Dick Turner, a club pro in Mesa, stayed even par on the front nine and scored a five-under 32 on the back nine despite increasingly gusty winds.

"We call Texas our home and it blows pretty good there," he said later.

Turner, who played on the U.S. professional tour in 1956, 1957, and 164, said his last victory was in the Arizona Open, "about 1971, I guess."

One stroke behind him after Friday's play were Jason Paukkunen of Vancouver and John Elliott of Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

John Morgan of Victoria was in another group at 72.
